WELL KNOWN MAN KILLED

George D. Strausbaugh, aged 46 years, 10 months and 22 days, of Berlin avenue, died in the Warner hospital, Gettysburg, Friday night, at 8:10 o'clock, from injuries he received that noon while at work at the Alwine Brick plant, Berlin Junction, when a 10-foot wall of brick which he was helping to undermine fell on him. He was hurt internally and severely shocked. His left leg was also broken and his head was badly battered.

Mr. Strausbaugh, with John Carbaugh and Percy Alwine, of Berlin Junction, was engaged in undermining an old brick kiln, when Mr. Carbaugh looked up and saw the wall falling. He called to his fellow workmen and he and Alwine ran away, but Mr. Strausbaugh tripped and fell toward the wall. He was buried in the pile of bricks and mortar, and fully 10 minutes was taken to extricate him from the debris. He was a mass of bruises and cuts. Dr. Geo. H. Seaks, this place, was summoned. Fab. Lawrence and Chas. Shrader accompanied the injured man and William C. Alwine, proprietor of the company, on a hurried trip to the hospital in Mr. Alwine's car. STATE COP'S MEMORY LAPSES; WOULD PUT LOCAL PEOPLE IN HIS STORY TELLING CLASS

He came right down and turned around and went right back again! "Hello! ITEM Office? Well, where the blinkety blink did you get that dinged stuff you published about a state policeman? You'll swallow that all right!" bellowed somebody on the other end of the 'phone, who represented himself to be the power-that-be at state police headquarters, Gettysburg, on Friday, referring to the wild tale published in this column last week, as told by a state cop, of the capture of three men and the recovery of $105,000 near Hanover, two weeks ago.

The ITEM, realizing it was useless to argue over the 'phone, invited the trooper kindly to come to New Oxford that the matter might be sifted to the bottom. The cop came all right with great bluff and bluster. After attempting to tell us our business and saying he was out to uphold the good name of the State Police, we asked for and obtained Mrs. N. M. Dicks' permission to have her give the trooper a description of the cop who had concocted the wild tale in the Circle Cafe. And here's the funny part of the story:

Mrs. Dicks, Mr. and Mrs. Galt, of Taneytown, and Geo. A. Klingel, one of the county's most prominent citizens, on laying eyes on the man, told His Efficiency that HE was the teller of the robbery tale!

Dinnerwetter! The trooper could not recall anything of the sort and after telling the four absolutely reliable people named above that they didn't know what they were talking about, that he hadn't drunk a cup of Circle Cafe coffee while talking of robbers and gold, that HIS records show HE was not down this way that evening, and that HE hadn't done this or that, HE left the Cafe in a huff, jumped on his motorcycle, and off HE went for Gettysburg.

Now what sort of report went into State headquarters, if any?

The ITEM has since learned that a state cop recently was said to be in such a condition that his motorcycle had to be stopt by a local garage man and the trooper, it is said, had to be helped on and off his machine.

The good name of the State Police undoubtedly needs upholding in this section, from these reports.

ROUND HILL BARN BURNED

Fire of unknown origin, which is said to have started in the fodder mow, destroyed the large bank barn, hog stable, wagon shed and other out-buildings on the farm of Elmer Moul, at Round Hill, Thursday afternoon. Nobody had been on the mow for three days and spontaneous combustion is ascribed as the cause of the blaze. Mr. Moul, on emerging from the house about 1:15 o'clock, observed smoke issuing from the barn and in a few seconds the flames burst forth. The man succeeded in saving all his live stock, but most of his machinery was burned, together with the rest of the contents. The barn had been built about 7 years ago. The loss is estimated at several thousand dollars, with about $1500 insurance. Mr. Moul will rebuild. Many neighbors responded and saved the house by hard work.

FRIENDS URGE CANDIDACY

At the urgent request of a host of friends of both parties, Dr. Eugene Elgin, of East Berlin, the present incumbent, will shortly announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Assembly from Adams county. It is expected that Dr. Elgin will have no opposition at the primary, which will be held this year in May. Dr. Elgin's record at Harrisburg has met with favor by most of the voters, and it is generally conceded that he should be returned for another term for the good of this district.

OIL STOVE EXPLODED

SEEKS TREASURE ON OCEAN BOTTOM

California Man Fits Out Expedition to Recover Cargo of Gold and Whisky.

Los Angeles, Cal.—One million dollars in gold and 304 barrels of sixty-year-old whisky have been located by a citizen of this city and he is now fitting out an expedition to recover the treasure. The fortunate man is F. B. Mansfield, a real estate dealer, who learned of the wealth awaiting him while on a vacation tour in northern California.

The gold and whisky formed the cargo of the ship Brother Jonathan, which sank off Crescent City on July 30, 1855. Official data obtained in Sank Off Crescent City.

Washington confirms the statement regarding the cargo and sinking of the vessel, which carried several hundred persons to their grave.

Mr. Mansfield is at Berkeley, Cal., fitting out an expedition to salvage the treasure. He has obtained the services of a diver with which he expects to reach the sunken vessel. The wreck is said to lie in 320 feet of water and to be readily accessible to divers.

Mr. Mansfield became interested in the sunken treasure while visiting in Crescent City and talking with a pioneer of the town. He was shown the rock that had sent the ship to its doom and with that as a starting point, he used a special instrument designed to detect the presence of precious metals. This instrument, he declares, accurately locates sunken gold and he is certain the salvage efforts will be richly rewarded.

TORRID LETTERS WIN DIVORCE

Husband Also Testifies That When He Was Sick Wife Refused to Take Care of Him.

Cincinnati, O.—A number of torrid love letters from Chicago men which Charles F. Mondary, 29, railroad clerk, 554 Laurel street, this city, introduced as evidence in domestic relations court here, and which he testified were written to his wife, Mary Mondary, twenty-seven, now in Chicago, secured a divorce for him.

One letter written by the wife to Mondary said: "I find there are lots of Chicago bachelors who are openly waiting for a nice little girl for a pet and see that she is well provided for. That is just how I am sailing along now. Let me know how you are getting along. As always, Mary." Mondary testified that his wife would not mend his clothes or cook his meals when they lived together in Chicago and when he was sick in 1917 she would not take care of him, but brought him home to his wealthy parents and left him.

Burning Pigeons Fall As Rockets Into River

St. Paul, Minn.—When an employee of a wholesale produce firm dived through a second-story window to escape flames which were consuming the building Thursday night, hundreds of pigeons followed him. As they merged from the broken window the black background of night made noticeable spots of flame on wings and tails of many of the birds. Their course was over the Mississippi river. Fanned by the motion of flying the flames spread until the birds were enveloped and many of them, like falling rockets, dropped into the stream.

Tarred and Feathered Stepson's Goods.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Mrs. Winona Moore is held in $500 bail for applying tar and feathers to her stepson's furniture. According to the complaint, the "malicious mischief" was done after the woman had a quarrel with the boy's father in which the stepson opposed her.

AGAIN TAKES BANDIT TRAIL

TERROR OF OUTLAWS

Law Enforcer of Earlier Day Built Reputation Which Strikes Fear in Heart of Bad Men of the Range.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Capt. Frank Canton, terror of bandits, outlaws and thieves has "hit the trail" again after a few years of virtual retirement here. He is after cattle thieves exclusively now and is making it warm for men engaged in that business. The Osage hills called him a few weeks ago and he's now out among the rich Indians getting evidence to convict men of stealing cows.

"This work isn't like that of the old days," Captain Canton says. "I don't go to the hills and the sticks, the caves and the canyons and underbrush like I did as a young man. My duties are to assist the county attorney in prosecutions after our field men and sheriffs have rounded up the men charged with cattle stealing."

Was Head of National Guard.

Captain Canton is Oklahoma agent of the Texas-Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association, an organization that he represented for several years before Governor Haskell appointed him adjutant general of the Oklahoma National Guard.

Very seldom are cattle stolen in Oklahoma that belong to members of the cattle raisers' association, Captain Canton says. The association maintains inspectors at the principal shipping and selling points and cattle belonging to members bear the association brand. An inspector is under no obligation, indeed has no authority, to apprehend cattle that do not bear that brand or make inquiry of the supposed owner as to how he came in possession of the cattle.

Presence Having Wholesome Effect. The presence of Frank Canton in the cattle country, old and stooped as he is, is said to have a wholesome effect. He was as courageous a man thirty years ago as ever rode the plains, and his intuition, perception and judgment were not excelled by any other law enforcer of the West.

Wyoming, where he was sheriff, felt his uncanny power. Montana outlaws escaped far away from his bailiwick. To Texas rangers he taught the arts of man-catching. In the Panhandle of Texas, in New Mexico, in Colorado and in northwestern Oklahoma his name gave law violators chills.

HOBOS AVENGE BENEFactor

Down-and-Outers Drag In Man for Stealing Stickpin From Social Worker.

New York.—The down-and-outers of the Bowery scoured lodging houses and poolrooms and then dragged before the police a man whom they accused of having snatched a $125 stickpin from Herman Muller, a social worker, in an east-side restaurant early today.

Muller was following his weekly custom of distributing free "feeds" to the economically unlucky, with the unfortunate ones telling him their troubles during the meal, when two of his guests set upon him and escaped with the pin.

A detective to whom Muller reported his loss climbed on a table and told the down-and-outers that it was a shame for their benefactor to be treated so shabbily and that if they did not get the culprits they would have him to reckon with.

Fumes From Still Kill Girl.

Detroit, Mich.—Fumes from a whisky still killed Grace Bartoleta, three years old. Little hope is held for the recovery of her two sisters and mother, who were also overcome.

PERPETUAL MOTION AGAIN?

Customer—That fountain pen you sold me wasn't any good.

Salesman—What was the matter with it?

Customer—The other day when writing with it, it stopped writing all of a sudden.

Salesman—Did you fill it?

Customer—No, it said self-filling on the box.

Daily Short Story.

Once there was a pretty girl. But she was poor.

She couldn't afford to buy a drug-store complexion.

She had to cultivate a natural one. Whereat a nice drug clerk fell in love with her.

So they were married and she had free soda water the rest of her life.

News Item.

"This statement claims that there is a river of ink in Algeria. Two streams join, one being impregnated with iron, the other with gallic acid. The combination, you understand, forms ink."

"I follow you. And I suppose a reed swamp near by grows fountain pens."

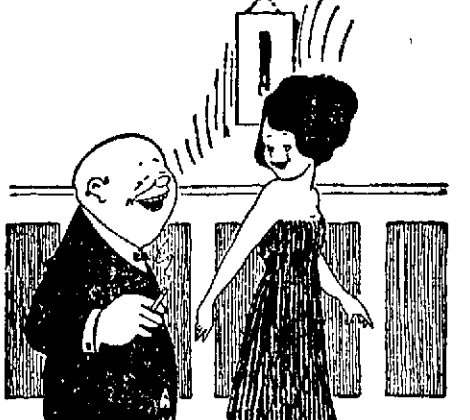

The Test.

"But how can I be sure of your love?" she asked. "You may be marrying me for my money."

"Well," he replied, thoughtfully, "you might give away your money before marriage."

"To whom?"

"Why, to me, of course."

HE GETS IT AGAIN

Cholly: I feel like a fool to-night.

Maudie: So glad you've recovered.

Just Remember This.

No one can knock you on the sly. And do so with impunity. The only knocker who gets by is known as Opportunity.

Proof of His Greatness.

"The worst affront you can pay to an artist is to turn his picture upside down while trying to find out what it is intended to represent."

"That's true in the case of an old-fashioned artist, but if you turn the masterpiece of a cubist painter upside down his chest expands perceptibly."

What Everybody Thinks.

Canvasser—Better buy this work. It will show you how to earn more money than you are getting.

Jones—Humph! I do that now.

Obligatory.

Cholly—Is Peggy a careful dresser? Willie—She has to be. She wears so few clothes that she doesn't dare to take any chances.

When Skirts Are Scant.

"Can your husband describe the way other women are dressed?"

"Certainly not."

"One of these unobservant men?"

"It isn't that he's unobservant. He's too polite."

Early Interest.

"You always seem willing to allow your adversary to close the debate."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "As the debate closes the audience usually shows signs of fatigue and a willingness to walk out."

The Old Offender.

"Why don't you reform?" inquired the kind-hearted caller.

"Mister," replied Bill the Burg, "when it comes to reform I'm purty near a record-breaker. I have reformed fifteen or twenty times."

Does So.

"How do you like this patent-leather hair?"

"I wish I had gotten some when a boy," declared the baldhead. "It looks very durable."

After Marriage.

"Men are unreliable."

"Eh?"

"A man promises to go through fire and water for a girl."

"Well?"

"And then won't go through a series of afternoon teas."

Lonesome.

"There's no use, I must take up golf."

"Need the exercise?"

"No; I want to understand what my friends are talking about."

ALL SETTLED

"The stork has delivered a ten-pound boy at my house," said a caller at the office of the Chiggersville Clarion. "I want you to put a piece about it in your paper."

"All right," said the editor. "I'll write a snappy headline for the announcement and call him a future President of the United States."

"You needn't bother about that. His mother and her relations have already decided that he's going to be a motion picture star, because he has a dimple in his chin."

A Deadly Designation.

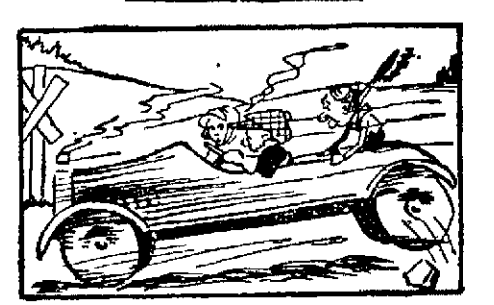

"Your political antagonist at least paid a glowing tribute to your intellectual attainments."

"It was about as mean and insidious a thing as he could have done," commented Senator Sorghum. "The surest way to defeat a man in my district is to give him the reputation of being a highbrow."

Money Misapplied.

"Did money ever help you to win an election?"

"On several occasions," replied Senator Sorghum. "It wasn't money that I spent myself, however. The opposition flourished so large a campaign fund that it made their candidate look like a tired business man instead of a statesman."

HE SHOULD WORRY

Wife: Not so fast George, you're frightening your poor old aunt to death in the back seat.

Hubby: Calm yourself dear, there's a handsome legacy coming to me when she's gone.

I'd Like to Be.

"I'd like to be a little fish."

Said youthful Jack McGrath, "For then I'd have no ears to wash. Nor hatter take a bath!"

Her Idea of It.

"My dear," said Mr. Plunger when he went home one evening, "I've something important to tell you—a receiver has been appointed to take charge of my affairs."

"How nice!" cooed Mrs. Plunger. "When will he hold his first reception?"

Language of the People.

"When you find the abbreviation 'Collop' after a word in a dictionary that means it is colloquial."

"Of course," said the practical politician. "And that part of the dictionary is used by successful campaigners more than any other."

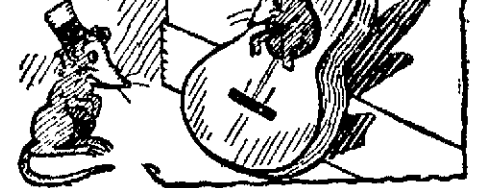

Optimism of Candidates.

"How's Sam Twobible getting along in his race for constable?"

"He's greatly encouraged."

"Yes?"

"Three citizens accepted cigars this morning and assured him of their support. Sam's predicting a groundswell."

MUSICAL

"You say your children are musical?"

"Sure, we are living in an ukulele now."

Nowhere, Is Right.

"It's lovely to live in a flat. You never can mislay your hat; You wear it always on your crown—There's no place to lay it down."

Gentle, but Effective.

The Resort Manager—Thank you, sir. Here's your receipted bill. Everything satisfactory?

The Departing Guest—I've had a worse experience. I've been black-jacked and robbed.

Away Out of Style.

"Does your wife complain when her clothes are out of style?"

"Not always," replied Mr. Meekton. "She went to a costume ball last winter and insisted, regardless of expense, in dressing like Queen Elizabeth."

Literally.

Dealer in second-hand garments (to assistant):—We can't mark this suit "Fashionable." It's too shabby.

Assistant:—No but you might mark it "Very much worn."

OF FRENCH ORIGIN

Unbuckled Galoshes Can Be Traced to Historic Incident.

Battle of Steinkirk, in 1692, Laid the Foundation for the Present Freakish Fashion.

How many of the young ladies who parade down Michigan boulevard with unbuckled galoshes clanking about their ankles know where and how the freakish fashion originated? asks a writer in the Chicago Journal.

In July, 1692, the French forces under Marshal Luxembourg were camped at Steinkirk, in what is now Belgium; while six miles away lay the allied troops under William III. of England. The two armies were too evenly balanced for either to attack unless it could secure some special advantage; and the French commander was kept informed of every allied move by a spy who was chief secretary to one of the German princes in the allied ranks. This man's treason was discovered, a pistol was put to his head, and he was compelled to write and forward a letter which was a trap. It told that the allies meant to send out a foraging party the next morning, and to guard this, would occupy the ground between the two armies with strong detachments of infantry.

With this letter preparing the way for a surprise, a general assault was planned, and came near being successful. The allied troops, a British brigade leading, almost reached the French lines before the trick was discovered. The French advance guard was smashed and routed. The Swiss mercenaries in the French service were beaten. But then the household troops of Louis XIV. entered the fray, led by young nobles and princes of the blood, and after a terrific struggle the English and their allies were driven back.

At that time, the French noble in military service was as much a dandy as a soldier. He wore lace collar and cuffs, as costly as his parents could afford, and arranged with the most fastidious care. But with the English column smashing its way into camp, there was no time for such fine work; the heroic dandies charged with collars loose and cravats untied; and Paris seized on this disarray and made a fashion of it to commemorate the victory. The name of "Steinkirk" was given to adornments worn askew or left flapping.

At irregular intervals since then, the Steinkirk fashion comes back. Gloves ties, blouses, all have been worn with elaborate carelessness which probably is meant to signify that the wearer has plenty more, and would not mind losing this one. But never, surely, did the fad take an uglier form than in its present aspect of unbuckled galoshes.

Shaking Them Up.

"Well, I golly, boys, there is more new window glass in Madison just now than ever before," said Major H. O. Woodford, of that city, to a number of friends at the statehouse. "You see when the Madison battery with its complete equipment of large guns was getting ready to go to Indianapolis to participate in the Foch celebration we decided to fire a 'sample salute,' as some of the local citizens had asked to 'see just how the guns acted.' When those big guns tore loose, with the lightest charge possible, there was a rattling and crash of window glass in some of the nearby buildings. From that day to this claims have been pouring in for broken window glass, and just yesterday a woman a half-mile away from where the guns were fired sent in a claim for glass. All the old pillows and tufts of rugs have disappeared from broken windows and the best old town along the Ohio river is looking very nifty now."—Indianapolis News.

A Quick Retort.

A certain city superintendent in the state of Indiana is not kindly disposed toward the manual training department of his school and it is his habit to relegate all the poor teachers to this department of "has-been" teachers, relates the Indianapolis News. The other day a young fellow who had lost his leg overseas and who had finished his college course after he came home, went to the superintendent for a job.

"Well," the superintendent tried to act as if he were conferring a favor, "I guess I might put you in the manual training department."

The young man had heard of the city's manual training department and he retorted with a bit of irony: "Yep, I guess there's where I belong—a peg-legged fellow in with the wooden heads."

Chinese Clock for Mexico City.

The Chinese colony in Mexico City has presented that municipality with a Chinese clock, which was officially accepted by President Obregon and a company of diplomats recently, and is now telling time in the Oriental way. The mayor wound the clock, and champagne was served. During the ceremony the Mexican hymn and the Chinese national anthem were played.

Hot Water at 20 Cents a Quart.

European hotels do not dispense hot water as freely as the American hostilities. In some of them it is practically impossible to have a room with bath. In others it is possible to secure hot water only by feeding a gas slot machine with coins, while the gas heats the water. One traveler figures that it averages 20 cents worth of gas to heat each quart of water.

HEALTHFUL VIGOR IN STRONG BLOOD

Rich, Red Blood Built Up by Pepto-Mangan—Liquid or Tablet.

Blood is strong and full of life-giving vigor when there are plenty of red cells in it. Anaemic people have little strength because there are not enough red cells in the blood. It is thin and watery. Weak blood makes faces pale, pulls down the strength and leaves the body tired, weak, and sickly.

A course in Gude's Pepto-Mangan restores weak blood to its normal strength. Taken regularly for a while it adds red cells to the blood. Then with good blood, the strength and vigor of health return. There is pleasure in living, with good blood running through the veins. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is put up in liquid and in tablet form. They are the same medicinally. Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for years. The name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on the package. Advertisement

TIGHT WINDOWS SAVE COAL BILL

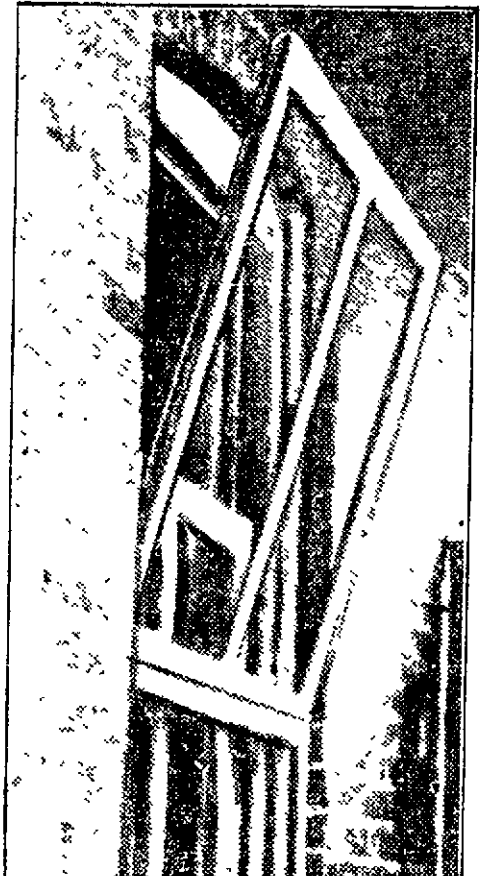

To Keep Home Comfortable It Will Be Found That Stopping Up Cracks Helps Greatly.

LEAKAGE BIG ON WINDY DAYS

Ordinary Felt Weather Stripping Helps to Keep Out Cold Air and Reduces Fuel Cost—Also Keeps Out Dirt and Smoke.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Stopping up cracks around doors and windows is an important factor in cutting down the coal bill and keeping the rooms comfortable, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1194, Operating a Home Heating Plant, published by the United States Department of Agriculture. More fuel invariably is consumed in a house with loosely fitted windows than in one where the cracks are protected. In the windward rooms of some houses on particularly cold windy days the leakage about window and door framing will be so great that the rooms can not be heated to a comfortable temperature, even by forcing the furnace to its limit.

Make Windows Tight With Weather Stripping.

Small Cracks Let in Much Air.
Tight-fitting windows, says the bulletin, are essential if leakage losses are to be kept down. Ordinary felt weather stripping helps to reduce this loss. Metal weather stripping is still better and adds materially in saving fuel. Tests have demonstrated that it is possible, by the use of metal weather stripping, to reduce by 88 per cent the leakage through a 1-32-inch crack when the wind is blowing 15 miles an hour and by 83 per cent with a 30-mile wind.

The condition of the windows in a building, whether tight, loose or just loose enough to rattle plays a very important part not only in the comfort derived from a heating plant but more noticeably in the annual cost of operation. Suitable metal weather stripping frequently reduces by 15 to 20 per cent the radiation required.

The prevention of window leakage means a saving of heat and a lessening of dirt blown into the house. In a certain apartment house, says the bulletin, situated near a railroad station in a large city, during the first season of its occupancy the heating system supplied sufficient heat with a reasonable economy of fuel, but smoke and dust were a nuisance. Metal weather stripping was applied before the next heating season, and as a result the temperature of the rooms was too high.

Big Fuel Saving.
A fuel saving of 15 to 25 per cent appears possible by equipping windows and doors with metal stripping. If, therefore, metal stripping is put in when a house is built, it is possible to reduce the size and cost of the heating plant in proportion to the reduction in radiation surface made possible. The cost of metal weather stripping may frequently be offset by the reduction in the cost of the heating plant.

Copies of the bulletin may be had upon request of the department at Washington, D. C.

HOT LUNCHES SERVED IN COUNTRY SCHOOLS

Midday Meal Presents Big Problem in Some Cases.

Offers Favorable Opportunity to Inculcate Habits of Cleanliness and to Teach Children Sanitation and Simple Cookery.

While the carrying of lunches is by far the most common practice, taking country and town together, there are few cases in which it is not desirable for the school to share with the home the responsibility for the noonday meal. In some places the task for the school may be hardly more than that of providing clean and safe places for lunch baskets, where the food will not be likely to become dirty or spoiled. In others it may be practically a hot dish with which to supplement foods brought from home. In still others, particularly where large attendance and many teachers and other workers make subdivision of labor a comparatively easy matter, it may be possible for the school to establish and maintain lunch rooms.

It is in the small country school with only one teacher that the midday meal presents the most difficult problems. The common custom is still for the pupils to bring their lunches, but there is a growing tendency to try the experiment of preparing part of the meal at school, and of allowing time for serving it carefully. If rightly handled, the meal, even under the unusual difficulties presented in the rural school, may offer the most favorable of all opportunities to inculcate habits of cleanliness and to teach sanitation and simple cookery. The situation, however, requires a teacher of ingenuity and of enthusiasm for her work.

The simplest of equipments includes a large kettle suitable to be used on the stove that heats the schoolhouse, measuring cup and spoons, paring knife, mixing spoon, dish pans, and towels. It will usually be possible for the boys to make a set of shelves for the dishes, using box lumber if no other is available, and for the girls to make curtains or other coverings for protecting the dishes from dust. The pupils will, as a rule, be found willing to bring plates, cups, bowls and spoons to keep down expenses. A fireless cooker is convenient for meat stews, meat and bean soups, cereal mushes, and many other dishes that require long cooking.

The recipes for the dishes cooked for lunch may be given to the older girls in school, discussed in class, and tried at home. The special dish for the day, which in winter is usually hot and in summer cold, can be prepared and served at noon by the girls in turn, working in groups, suggest home economics specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. It will often be necessary to serve the food to the children at their seats, a practice which is not especially objectionable if the schoolhouse is clean and well ventilated, the desks carefully cleaned before meals, and the building thoroughly screened to keep out flies.

GIVE BRUSHES PROPER CARE

One Used for Oil Paint or Stain Should Be Thoroughly Washed in Turpentine.

Brushes for applying stain, varnish, paint, and oil are manufactured in various sizes and qualities. In general, a wide brush of good quality will be found most convenient and economical, and if properly cared for can be used over and over again. It is pointed out in Farmers' Bulletin 1219, Floors and Floor Coverings, recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

A varnish brush may be kept in the varnish in which it is used, or in case of shellac varnish, in alcohol; but brushes used in oil paint and oil stain, unless they are to be used again within a few days, should be thoroughly washed in turpentine or kerosene, rinsed in gasoline or benzine, washed again in warm soap suds, thoroughly shaken, and hung up to dry with the bristles down. Paint brushes that are to be used again the next day may simply be wrapped in several thicknesses of paper, or they may be kept for several days with the bristles submerged in turpentine or kerosene. If kerosene is used, the brush must be shaken and rinsed in turpentine before it is put into paint again. Brushes used in water stain may be washed and rinsed in clear water.

All Around the House
Never flavor a boiled custard until cold.
If soap is allowed to melt it will last twice as long.
A little curry powder added to soups or stews makes the dish quite different in taste.
An orange, apple or lemon put in the box with sweet cakes gives a delicious flavor.
A tablespoonful of vinegar added to the last rinsing water in which silk, crepe de chine and ribbons are washed freshens the colors.

Home Town Helps

"SMALL HOMES MAKE CITY"

Testimony of Expert Who is Warm Advocate of Building Zone Idea During Town's Youth.

"Make a city of the owners of small homes and you will have a well-run city."
This was the verdict of Edward W. Basset, counsel of the zoning commission of the New York board of estimate and father of the zoning laws, after an exhaustive review of city development under the building zone system.

"Before the days of zoning," said he, "the head of a family would be forced two or three times to sell his private home because he was pushed out by advancing stores or apartment houses. Then he would usually move to New Jersey, Long Island or Westchester, and New York would lose a good citizen. A home owner takes a lively interest in local improvement and neighborhood welfare. Until New York adopted the zoning plan, there was no encouragement for small home owners inside of the city limits. Now the owner of a small home is better protected in many parts than if he goes out into suburban villages."

"Small detached homes are springing up rapidly in all of the outlying boroughs, especially in Brooklyn and Queens. The home owner sees that in residence location he is protected against invasion of stores, small factories and garages. In the D and E districts he is safe from large tenements and apartments. He is willing to put his earnings in the equity of a small home and pay off his second mortgage by installments because the zoning plan has lessened the dangers that would wipe out his home equity."

ALWAYS TIME WELL SPENT

"Cleanup Week," as an institution, Should Be a Feature of Every Town and Village.

Cleanliness, as we have been reliably informed, is next to godliness.

And community cleanliness is just as important as individual cleanliness. If we are to have a pleasant, healthful and decent city to live in.

Milwaukee has always occupied an enviable position among the cities of the country for its civic tidiness, and the annual institution known as "cleanup week" has helped materially to this happy state of affairs.

We have been having a salutary "cleanup" in respect of the moral surroundings of the city. A good deal of rubbish has been dragged out and done away with and stray corners are still being explored and tidied up with excellent results in so far as the moral atmosphere is concerned.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

FOILING SMALL BOY

Because small boys do not seem to be able to refrain from throwing stones, the Los Angeles park commission has protected the glass covered rules and regulations by heavy wire screens.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Practical City Planning.

There is no mystery whatever about city planning. It is only the application of common sense business methods to the development of a city. Too frequently city planning has been understood in this country as relating merely to the esthetic side of city improvement and city development. We must get rid of that notion.

The element of beauty, of course, must never be overlooked, but it would be more to the point to fix as the goal of a city plan the idea of making the city a more practical city. Real city planning must inevitably deal more with the practical than with the beautiful. It must aim for better and more attractive living conditions.—Charles F. Coffin.

Billions Invested in Homes.

There are approximately 6,000,000 families in the United States living in their own homes. This represents an aggregate investment of $30,000,000,000, since builders and contractors declare that the average American home is valued at $5,000. At 5 per cent the American home owners are therefore paying out about $1,500,000,000 for the privilege of enjoying life under roofs that belong to them. The 5 per cent will easily take care of repairs, taxes and interest on the investment.

"Say Less and Do More."

If we could only make our hands move as actively as our tongue, if we could say less and do more for each other's good, not alone would every home be happier, but communities would be greatly enriched thereby.—John Wapamaker.

DIDN'T HAVE TO HAVE PROOFS

Colored Lady Had Confidence in the Ability of Witnesses to Sustain Her Charge.

A southern magistrate had before him as a complaining witness a colored woman who had caused to be held a man on the charge that he had attacked her with a pair of scissors. "He mighty neab gouged my eye out, judge," she said. "He poked me in de face with them scissors, judge, not once, but fo' or five times. He jest cut up my face like it was a yard of ribbon. There ain't no mo' dangerous man alive, judge."

The magistrate looked her over. She had a wide, smooth, yellow face that did not have a mark on it. He told her to repeat her story, and she went through it again, telling how the man had slashed her face with that pair of scissors. "But," said the judge, "there isn't a mark on your face."
"Marks!" she exclaimed, indignant. "Marks! What I care fo' marks, lemme ask yo' that? I got witnesses, I tell you!"

Pulled Through.

"Your son has settled down to hard work."

"Yes," said the proud father. "I'm glad now that I had confidence in the boy. When he took to playing the ukulele and 'stepped on the gas' when he wasn't dancing, I got a bit discouraged, but I kept telling mother not to worry, that he'd make a man out of himself yet."

Foul Play.

The Scottish bowling team is accompanied by a band of pipers which plays prior to every important match. The general opinion is that this gives a very unfair advantage to the Northerners, who are used to it.—The Passing Show (London).

The Finish of Bluebeard.

Bluebeard—Well, I'm a widower again. How about it? I'm crazy about you.

His Latest Love—I think a lot of you, Bluebeard, but you'll have to shave first. I'm awfully ticklish.

Anyhow, the silent grouch isn't improving anybody.

COMPANION KNEW "OLD BIRD"

Inquiry Brought Instant Response Considerably Embarrassing to Youthful New Teacher.

I was just out of college and had gone for the first time to teach in a high school. I had not, yet lost my college girl propensity for seeking to extract fun out of everything, whether serious or comic. A formal meeting of the faculty of the city was in progress, with the prominent school men—superintendent, commissioners, and principals—seated on the platform. Among them was a severe-looking old pedagogue with a long white, flowing beard.

Next to me sat a sedate woman whom I rashly had taken to be a new member of the faculty.

I turned to her with what I supposed to be an infectious burst of confidence and giggled: "Who's the old bird with the whiskers?"

The woman turned her face directly toward me, looked me up and down, with an expression that congealed the blood within me, and said, curtly: "My father!"—Chicago Tribune.

FLATLY REFUSED TO "SLIDE"

Elderly Lady's Dignity Was Hurt by Request Made to Her by Fellow Passenger.

She was one of those fussy little old women, all primed and with her hair in a curl.

When she got aboard the street car several men—yes, there are some who still respect gray hairs on a street car—got up and offered a seat. She accepted one gentlemanly proffer, but didn't keep the seat long. When she had finally found repose a woman next to her said:

"Would you mind sliding over just a bit, please? Then another lady can have a seat."

Her gray-haired majesty rose to lofty heights.

"Slide? Slide?" she spluttered. "I will not slide. I will arise and take my body elsewhere."

And sitting her motions to her words she arose and took her body up to the front of the car, where her dignity would not be assailed by a request to slide.—Indianapolis News.

Only on "Appro."

In one of our ancient towns which has recently been the scene of a pageant, a party of Americans was being conducted over the admirable abbey.

"The age of this part and that were pointed out by a learned attendant, and, at length: "That arch," said he, "may possibly go back to Alfreda and Edward."

"Don't you like it?" said a guest promptly.

The attendant explained that he did not understand.

"Why are you sending it back, anyway? Doesn't it suit you?"

Blessings of Obscurity.

"Doesn't it make you discontented to read about movie stars getting $2,000 a week?"

"Sometimes it does," said the citizen whose income is $3,000 a year, "but, on the other hand, it is a lot of satisfaction for me to know that I don't have to tell an inquisitive public what I eat, what I wear, how I amuse myself in my leisure moments and the exact state of my affections from day to day."

Conserving Her Energy.

Mr. Constant Knagg—You don't mean to tell me your wife allows you to interrupt her lectures?

Mr. Henry N. Peck—Along toward the finish she gives me a slight chance while she gathers her breath for the last word.

Page Mr. Edison.

"I've heard that the new talking machines have an automatic self-stopping device."

"Huh! Then my wife must be an old model."

Revelation.

"Jack says that I'm one girl in a hundred." "Yes, dear—one in a hundred he's made love to."

Nothing is more detestable than other people's prejudices.

Many a man earns his bread by the sweat of his hired man's brow.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE— DRINK HOT TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking up a cold.

Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

RUB RHEUMATISM FROM STIFF ACHING JOINTS

Rub Soreness from joints and muscles with a small trial bottle of old St. Jacobs Oil Stop "losing" Rheumatism. It's pain only; not one case in fifty requires internal treatment. Rub soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Oil" right on the "tender spot," and by the time you say Jack Robinson—out comes the rheumatic pain. "St. Jacobs Oil" is a harmless rheumatism cure which never disappoints and doesn't burn the skin. It takes pain, soreness and stiffness from aching joints, muscles and bones; stops sciatica, lumbago, backache, neuralgia.

Limber up! Get a 35 cent bottle of old-time, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" from any drug store, and in a moment you'll be free from pains, aches and stiffness. Don't suffer! Rub rheumatism away.

HEALING CREAM QUICKEST RELIEF FOR HEAD COLDS

Colds and catarrh yield like magic to soothing, healing, antiseptic cream that penetrates through every air passage and relieves swollen, inflamed membranes of nose and throat. Your clogged nostrils open right up and you can breathe freely. Hawking and snuffling stop. Don't stay stuffed up and miserable.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist. Apply a little in the nostrils and get instant relief. Millions endorse this remedy known for more than fifty years.

APPLY SULPHUR TO HEAL UP YOUR SKIN

Broken Out Skin and Itching Eczema Helped Over Night

For unsightly skin eruptions, rash or blotches on face, neck, arms or body, you do not have to wait for relief from torture or embarrassment, declares a noted skin specialist. Apply a little Mentho-Sulphur and improvement shows next day.

Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation. The moment you apply it healing begins. Only those who have had unsightly skin troubles can know the delight this Mentho-Sulphur brings. Even fiery, itching eczema is dried right up.

Get a small jar from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.

MCSherrystown Homes ENTERED BY THIEVES

The home of Miss Mary Lawrence, manager of the branch store of N. B. Carver & Sons at McSherrystown, was robbed of over $40 Thursday evening while she and Miss Tillie Lawrence were at church. The house of Clement Sneeringer, three doors below, was also entered that same evening evidently with the intention to rob. Mr. Sneeringer, who had been indisposed and had not attended church, was in the house at the time and evidently scared off the intruders. Nothing was taken from this home. It is not known how the thief or thieves gained entrance to the Lawrence home. Miss Lawrence found the back door had been unbolted from the inside, the robbers evidently having gone out that way. Nothing else was disturbed. Mr. Sneeringer, aroused by a noise downstairs, went down but found nothing unusual except that the cellar door was ajar. Next morning the outside cellar door was also found open.

THAT MORNING LAMENESS

If you are lame every morning, and suffer urinary ills, there must be a cause. Often it's weak kidneys. To strengthen the weakened kidneys and avert more serious troubles, use Doan's Kidney Pills. You can rely on this man's testimony.

John J. Tawney, 234 Baltimore St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I suffered off and on with rheumatic pains and kidney ailments. My back ached constantly and often in the morning I was so lame and stiff I could hardly get out of bed. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. Someone advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I got some. I was surprised at the quick relief I received. I am not bothered by rheumatic pains now and I am much better all around."

OVER TWO YEARS LATER, Mr. Tawney said: "I still use Doan's Kidney Pills. In fact, I always keep them in the house. I know if I take a few as soon as I have any symptoms of kidney trouble. I will be saved a great deal of suffering."

At the regular meeting of the Abbotstown board of health, Wednesday evening, a reorganization was effected by a re-election of the old officers as follows: President, Dr. T. C. Miller; secretary, Charles Hafer; health officer, Jacob M. Nickey. The other members of the board are Emory S. Alwine, Allen March and H. E. Shellenberger.

S. E. Swope, Gettysburg, has been notified of his appointment as an assistant State fire marshal of this district.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear wife, Mary Ann Null, who departed this life two years ago, Nov. 25, 1919.

What grief and pain she suffered here, None of us will ever know.

But Jesus took her home with him.

Where no tears will ever flow.

Into sweetest rest she has entered.

No more to grieve and weep.

She is smiling upon me from heaven.

My dear wife has fallen asleep.

When you ask me, do I miss her?

Yes it fills my heart with pain.

But her spirit softly whispers,

In heaven we shall meet again.

Time may pass and years may fly.

And every hope will fade and die.

And every peaceful dream may set.

But my dear wife I cannot forget.

By her husband,

REPEATER FACES COURT

Charged with the misdemeanor of fraudulently voting twice in same district on the same day at the general election held in Adams county on November 8, Guy F. Blocher, Littlestown, was arrested Friday by private Leggoe of the Gettysburg station of the State police on a process issued by the Court at its session on November 14. A preliminary hearing was held Friday before Justice Blocher, Littlestown, when Guy Blocher was released under $500 bail furnished by his father, W. F. Blocher, for his appearance at Court, which begins Monday, January 23. Blocher is said to have entered the polling place in Littlestown about 9 o'clock and voted. At 11 o'clock, Blocher reappeared at the polls and demanded another ballot. When it was refused, Blocher is said to have raised a disturbance and compelled the judges of the election to give him another ballot. Those who were present in the voting place when Blocher put in his second appearance declare that he was under the influence of liquor, according to the police. On Monday, November 14, the day set by the Court to hear the returns of the constables of the various townships, Constable Goucher, Littlestown, reported this occurrence to Judge McPherson. The Judge immediately ordered the district attorney to issue a process asking for the arrest of Blocher and the district attorney swore out a warrant. The case is the first of its kind in the history of the county, and the charge which is a very serious one carries with it a heavy fine and jail sentence in case of conviction.

The body of Pvt. Jacob Markline, of Co. C, 11th Infantry, who died in France on October 31, 1918, from wounds received in action, was brought to the home of the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Markline, Sr., about three miles from Hanover along the Abbottstown pike. The funeral will be held on Sunday, January 15, at 1 p. m. from the house. Interment at Bair's meeting house. Besides the parents, a number of brothers and sisters survive, including Mrs. Daniel Laughman, Bittingers; Mrs. Alfred Albright, at home, and Mrs. Clarence Warner, Hanover.

FORGERY CHARGED

Already under bail for a hearing for an alleged offense he committed in Shrewsbury, several days ago, N. C.
McSherry, 25 years old, a member of a prominent family in Gettysburg, was arrested in Hanover by Chief
Crabbs, Saturday, on forgery charge, preferred before Justice Sell, by Paul Britcher. McSherry, it is claimed, presented a check of $500, made payable to William McSherry, a step-brother and a prominent attorney-at-law, of Gettysburg, to four banking institutions in Hanover. The check, dated January 7, 1922, was one for the People's Bank of Hanover but the name of the bank was changed to the Gettysburg National bank. When the banks refused to cash the check, Mc-Sherry went to the Hanover Savings bank, where he was told that the check would be honored if he could get someone to identify him. McSherry, it is claimed, returned to the bank
with the signature of Paul Britcher on it. The bank communicated with Britcher, who claimed that his name was a forgery. McSherry was then placed under arrest. He was committed to jail, but later taken to Gettysburg, where he secured bail. He had borrowed Britcher's fountain pen to endorse his name on the check. Mc-Sherry, it is said, went to Hanover,
and registered at the Albaugh hotel,
and gave his residence as Silver City,
New Mexico. An investigation by Chief Crabbs revealed that McSherry is the same I. N. McSherry who was arrested in Shrewsbury several days ago. It is said that he offered a check to a proprietor of a garage there, in payment for gasoline and then attempted to run away. He was out on bail Saturday morning when he was arrested. It is believed he is of unsound mind and will probably be examined before being given a hearing.

The young man, who has been making his home with his step-brother, in Gettysburg, has been held in good repute in his home town. He is unmarried, and is said to have served overseas during the World War. He was dismissed lately from the Gettysburg National bank, where he was employed as a clerk. He claimed he was on his way to New Mexico. He maintained a calm stolidity during the examination and kept smoking a cigarette all the while.

URNS OUT BAD EGG

Should R. P. Farrington, of Philadelphia and Washington, return to Gettysburg, he will have to face a charge preferred against him for passing a worthless check for $10 on
C. Ross Shuman, and for purchasing an overcoat from O. H. Lestz to the value of $22.50 and having it charged to the Gettysburg chapter of the Red Cross. Farrington came to Gettysburg last July as a traveling salesman and registered at the Hoffman
Hotel. On July 18 he attempted to commit suicide by drinking tincture of iodine. His groans were heard by Mrs. Howard Mittinger at the time and his room was broken into, and he was rushed to the Warner Hospital, where the iodine was removed from his stomach. The reason he assigned at the time for attempting suicide were his inability to get employment, lack of funds and troubles with his family.
The Gettysburg chapter of the Red Cross befriended Farrington after his discharge from the hospital and procured him a job in the Gettysburg
Panel factory, where he worked until Saturday. It is understood, however, that he spent most of the money he made and usually was without funds.
Saturday evening he left.

Worth Considering.—The question is not so much how you contract a cold, but how to get rid of it with the least loss of time and inconvenience.
If you will consider the experience of others under similar circumstances, who have been most successful in checking their colds, in their beginning, you will secure a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without delay, and use it faithfully. There are many families who use this preparation successfully for years and hold it in high esteem. It is excellent.

The Boys Club of St. Mary's, Mc-
Sherrystown, may organize a band.

LAPHAM ARRESTED AGAIN

Percy and Harry McMaster, of East Berlin, appeared against J. Costella Lapham, also of East Berlin, at a trial Monday morning in the county jail charging him with "wantonly pointing fire arms" at them, Dec. 15. Lapham is under $1,500 bail to wait a hearing at court for carrying concealed deadly weapons and for a murderous assault upon Orville Ziegler in the butcher shop of Charles Wolfe, East Berlin. Lapham fired one shot at Ziegler after some heated words in the store, it is said. The shot went wild and Ziegler fled. Lapham was arrested later in the day and taken to Gettysburg. It is alleged that he was under the influence of liquor at the time. Both Percy and Harry McMasters claim that Lapham, before his assault on Ziegler, pointed his revolver at them and threatened to do them bodily injury. On December 22, they also swore out a warrant for the arrest of Lapham. After hearing the testimony, Mr. Hill placed another $500 bail on Lapham and recommitted him to jail, to await a trial.

In the sheriff's office at the jail Monday morning, Albert Vaughn, of Highland township, plead guilty of stealing a quantity of silver and bed-clothing from the cottage of Rev. J. B. Baker, along Marsh creek, during the fall. The stolen goods consisted of 19 pieces of silver, 7 pillows and cases and a cot. After hearing the charge, Vaughn entered a plea of guilty and was committed to jail where he had been since his arrest on December 21.

At a reorganization meeting of the Gettysburg Mutual Fire Insurance company, Monday morning, officers of the past year were re-elected to serve during 1922. The officers are: S. Miley Miller, president; Howard G. Blocher, Littlestown, vice president; W. E. Kapp, Biglerville, secretary; S. E. Gochenour, Bendersville, treasurer, and John D. Keith, Esq., attorney. The report of the auditors of the company, S. B. Gochenour, Bendersville and G. A. Klingel, New Oxford, for the past year, showed total resources of $25,713.47 and no liabilities. During the year 1921, the company has paid $1174.34 in fire losses.

"The lay members of the church must do more work in the churches and Sunday schools and not throw the whole burden upon the minister," was the admonition of the Hon. A. R. Brodbeck, Hanover, former Congressman, in an address to a father and son social held Thursday evening in the P. O. S. of A. Hall in Cashtown. Over 75 fathers and their sons attended the social.

Ten shares of stock of The First National Bank of York Springs were sold at the sale of Mrs. Minerva Dardorf to the following persons at the following prices: H. B. Pearson, 4 shares at $227; Dr. E. W. Cashman, 3 shares at $220 and 1 share at $216.50; the remaining 2 shares being bought by W. M. Weidner for $215 each.

George Wharton Pepper, Philadelphia lawyer, was appointed United States senator by Governor Sproul Monday to succeed the late Boies Penrose. Under the law the appointment stands until a successor is selected at the November election to fill the unexpired Penrose term ending in 1927.

The question, "Can A Woman Always Save A Man?" is answered in the novel, "The Son of the Vine", by Fr. Will W. Whalen, of Buchanan Valley. The author was asked where he got the idea for the story, and he admitted he ran across the originals not far from Adams County.

The newly chartered Gettysburg bus company will run an extra bus to and from Harrisburg when special attractions are to be seen at the theatres of the capital city. Another daily bus will be added in order to properly accommodate the public.

Mrs. Wm. S. Hendricks, of York Springs, fell on the ice on Saturday week, injuring her ankle to an extent that led to her being taken to Harrisburg where an X-ray examination showed that a small bone had been fractured.

"Spiky" Klunk, McSherrystown, has issued a challenge to Chas. H. Harman, of Philadelphia, grand pool champion of Pennsylvania, for a game or series of games.

Byron W. King, of the School of Oratory, Pittsburgh, will deliver one of his famous lectures in the Abbottstown Lutheran church, Saturday evening, January 28.

Two mules and one horse recently died for Charles U. Kennedy, of Huntington township, their deaths being caused, it is thought, by mouldy corn fodder.

A machine driven by Guy Stover, of Littlestown, rammed the rear end of the buggy of William Bish, Union Mills, and damaged it considerably.

The engagement of Charles B. Kuhns, of Conneville, to Miss Corn E. Trimmer, Gettysburg, was announced recently.

John W. Grim, Abbottstown, moved his saw mill into the Harry Parr timber tract, near Hanover, last week.

W. L. McKinney has been appointed auditor for Hanover borough, vice Harry J. Stambaugh, resigned.

Of the 3,600,000 rabbits killed in Pennsylvania during the last season, 33,000 were bagged in Adams.

Lester Baum, Bermudian, accepted a position with Kapp and Seibert, of Dillsburg, as a truck driver.

Union services will be held in the churches of Hanover all this week.

FARM BUREAU MEETING

The morning session of the all-day convention of the Adams County Farm Bureau, held in Gettysburg, Thursday, ended with the election of officers for the ensuing year; the address of the retiring president, J. L. Butt, Esq., and the report of the farm agent, Paul Hoffman. Almost 100 members of the farm bureau were present. C. J. Tyson, of Flora Dale, was elected president for the coming year; G. W. Koser, of Biglerville, was chosen vice president; Harry F. Stambaugh, Pine Run, treasurer, and J. C. Bream, near Gettysburg, succeeds himself as secretary. That the success and prosperity of the town is closely interwoven with the success of all agriculture was the keynote of the address of Secretary of Agriculture Rasmussen, who addressed the members of the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce and the Adams County Farm Bureau at noon at Hoffman Hotel. At the afternoon meeting, which followed the luncheon, W. B. Connell, an authority on livestock, and H. D. Monroe, poultry specialist, both from State College, were speakers. Many women attended the meetings and the luncheon.

Urging better grading of farm products in Adams county, State Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Rasmussen, speaking at the afternoon session of the Farm Bureau meeting in its annual conference, informed the members of that organization that this lack of grading was the reason the products of Pennsylvania farmers do not command the prices secured by farmers in other states.

The Hon. Rush Gillan, of Chambersburg, presided as president judge in the place of Hon. D. P. McPherson in the Adams county court session Friday morning when the case of Estella N. McDannel, of Franklin township, against J. Cameron Thomas, of the same township, was being presented. The case arose out of the sale of some land by Estella N. McDannel to Mr. Thomas who refused to pay the stipulated sum of $3,905 because he alleges that Miss McDannel does not have a clear title to the real estate. The land was willed to her by her father, Charles C. McDannel, who died in January, 1913. Judge Gillan after hearing the evidence withheld his opinion and will present it at a future session of the court. Judge McPherson was unable to preside in the case by being personally interested in the transfer of the property.

York county led the state last year in the amount of butter produced and the amount received for the product. The production was 1,625,666 pounds sold at an average price of 42 cents, the total value being $682,779.75. Lancaster county was a close second. Adams county report was 515,369 lbs. at 35 cents and total of $180,373.15. During the year there were 36,011,500 pounds of butter made on Pennsylvania farms and this was sold for an average of 44 cents per pound, or a total value of $15,831,458.46. In only two other counties was the price less than in Adams.

The personnel of the Sixth District of the State Highway Department, which includes the counties of Adams, York and Franklin, will remain unchanged. T. C. Frame will be retained as assistant engineer. The district office will remain at Gettysburg, and the office force is to be maintained. By eliminating several districts the Highway Department has reduced the number from 18 to 15.

Charles Morris Young, the prominent Philadelphia artist, who spent many years in Gettysburg painting pictures and interpreting the country side about his home near Round Top, has been engaged recently in landscape painting in and around Philadelphia and has had a successful exhibition of his paintings at the Radnor Hunt Club, near Bryn Mawr.

According to the record, 204 divorce suits were started in the York county courts during the past year. Clerk Smith issued 1,216 licenses to wed, 313 less than issued in 1920. Upwards of 500 non-support or desertion cases appeared in court during the past year.

John Thomas, teacher of the Center Mills school, was presented with a sweater, pair of fine gloves and silk handkerchief, showing the appreciation of patrons and pupils of the school for his work on the Christmas exercises given by the school.

By the Legislative apportionment based on the basis of the latest national census, Hanover has been transferred to the second from the fourth district, York county, which is discontinued. York city comprises the first district.

The First National Bank of Fairfield has declared a semi-annual dividend of five per cent. The stock of this institution sold recently at $200 a share, par value $100.

The Pennsylvania Department of the American Legion will conduct a state wide drive for new members starting January the 16th and ending March 1st.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS TO HAVE INSPECTIONS

Through the co-operation of those in charge of five parochial schools in Adams county with representatives of the State Department of Health, more than 800 children will be given medical examinations during the next few weeks. According to the laws of the state of Pennsylvania pupils in the public schools are required to be examined once each year and a report on every child sent to the State Department of Health. The same plan has been adopted by each of the Catholic schools in the county, except one. Physicians have been secured by the schools to make the examinations. Dr. A. C. Rice will visit the McSherrytown schools, Dr. George Seaks, the schools at New Oxford and Bonneauville; Dr. H. S. Lindaman, the schools in Littlestown, and Dr. C. G. Crist, those in Gettysburg. The cost of conducting the examination will be borne by the individual schools as no provision is made by the state to extend the medical tests into private institutions. The Department of Health, however, will aid in checking up the reports and make suggestions for improving sanitary, lighting and heating conditions. Adams county is one of the first in the state to report a large percentage of parochial schools accepting the invitation of the state to inaugurate the medical inspection plan.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

UNDERTAKER CONVICTED

Charles H. Mauk, of Harrisburg, who for a number of years conducted the undertaking business in York Springs, recently was convicted on a charge of pretending to sell to Millard W. McCracken in May, 1919, a casket and shroud to be used for the burial of his brother, Howard H. McCracken, who died in the State Hospital. When Mr. and Mrs. McCracken came a few days later for the funeral they found that the body had been buried. Further investigation brought an admission from Mauk that there had been no minister and a charge of $5 for his services was returned by the undertaker. Becoming suspicious Mr. McCracken arranged to have his brother's body exhumed and when this was done it was found that the body had been buried in a rough pine box, smaller than the ordinary rough box. The body had nothing on but underclothes, there was no lining in the box, only some excelsior with cheese cloth over it. The corpse was found to be in a cramped or crouched position in the box. Prosecution of Mauk followed.

A Million Dollars Couldn't buy a Pint of Karo Syrup drawn from a Barrel — why?

SYRUP smeared on the outside of a barrel, or dripped from the spigot, attracts flies, dust, and everything that is unappetizing and dangerous to health.

One of the most frequent of all causes for fever and dysentery is the germs tracked over food by the contaminated feet of flies.

You may be running terrible risks of infection for yourself or the children when you buy syrup run through the dirty spigot of a barrel.

Be discriminating and buy clean, pure Karo in sterilized cans, and protect the health of your family.

HERE AND THERE

At an organization meeting, Thursday afternoon, the jury commissioners of Adams county elected Samuel Cashman, Straban township, to succeed Amos L. Minter, of Butler township, as clerk of that body.

Before the communion service in the Abbottstown Reformed church on Sunday morning, the following, who were elected two weeks ago, were installed by the pastor: Trustee, Jonas Hildebrand; deacons, Reuben Altland and Lester Hoover; elders, Jeremiah Lillich and Samuel Meckley.

George W. Parr, of Littlestown, and George B. Thomas, Hanover, arrested Saturday night for reckless driving across the railroad tracks at the eastern end of West York, were each fined $5 after a hearing before Burgess Nickey.

A party of about 35 young ladies from McSherrystown and Hanover made the hearts of the boys in the Paradise Protectors glad on Sunday when they entertained them and gave them a fine supper. At 2:30 p. m. a delightful musical program under the direction of Miss Marie Timmins was rendered in a very creditable manner, and at the conclusion each of the 124 boys was presented with a toy. After this the boys were invited to the dining hall to partake of a delicious luncheon. At 5 p. m. benediction was given in the Protectors Chapel. In the morning barbers from Hanover and McSherrystown cut the hair of the boys.

Two "peepers," boys, evidently encouraged by former successes in crime, were caught Saturday evening after an exciting chase over McSherrystown by a posse of young men, after they had attempted to enter the cellar of a house. They were taken before Burgess Pfaltzgraff for a hearing, who, in view of their age, allowed them to depart with light sentences. One of the boys, living near that town, was ordered to remain out of it for 30 days. The other boy was ordered to remain in his home at night for the same length of time under penalty of arrest.

Forty-one inquiries were made after one house for rent in Hanover.

The Principals' Association of Adams county went on record Saturday morning at their regular meeting in the High School auditorium, Gettysburg, as favoring the educational program of the State Department of Public Instruction as recently announced by Secretary Finnegan and vigorously denounced the action of the State Grange at its recent meeting in York when it declared that the program of the Department was unsound.

Altho money can not heal the wounds of sorrow borne by Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Markle, Hanover, whose three little boys were fatally burned on the afternoon of December 28, yet it can be of aid, and the sum of $637.81 has been handed to the parents by Chief Crabbs, who made a canvass of citizens, which was responded to liberally. Mrs. Markle who, in an attempt to save the lives of her children, was seriously burned, is still in the York Hospital, suffering from her injuries, and her condition is still serious.

Movies are shown in East Berlin every Thursday and Saturday evenings.

Harper J. Wentz, former New Oxford H. S. principal, and an F. & M. student, of East Berlin, while returning from the home of H. S. Bolan, Oberlin where he had attended a party given to F. & M. students, was attacked by three highwaymen in Negro Hollow, a desolate place between Enhaut and Oberlin. He put up a terrific battle and held them at bay until an auto stopped. The thugs then disappeared into the shadows and fortunately obtained none of his valuables. Aside from being roughly handled and badly frightened Mr. Wentz escaped tortures usually meted out by thugs.

Dog owners have just three more days to secure licenses for their animals. On January 16, a dog owner who has not complied with the law, will be liable to prosecution, whether a license is subsequently secured or not.

George M. Carbaugh, of Gettysburg, was arrested Tuesday morning by Charles H. Wilson on a statutory charge. He will be taken to Waynesboro for a hearing before Justice Potter.

Robert C. Miller, of Gettysburg, state superintendent of public printing and binding, was Monday awarded the contract to rent the Graefenburg Inn, located on the Lincoln Highway 15 miles west of Gettysburg, by the State Forestry Commission after opening five competitive bids for the lease of the Inn. Mr. Miller offered to lease the property for 15 years, with a 5-year renewal privilege at an annual rental of $400 a year, and he agreed to expend $3,000 on permanent improvements during the 15 year period. It is understood repairs will be made and the place opened for tourists this summer.

The Fix cigar factory, East Berlin, resumed work last week after a shutdown of a few weeks.

The firm of Rider & Yingling opened up for business in the plumbing line on January 3 in Littlestown. The members of the firm are Thomas J. Rider, Littlestown, and William J. Yingling, formerly of Baltimore. Mr. Rider purchased the plumbing and heating business from E. J. Two weeks ago Drs. Spatz and McDowell attended a fox chase near Hunterstown. Dr. Spatz, who is no horseman, was induced to ride an old hunter. He was instructed to hold on to the saddle, which he did. The old hunter, which the latter was riding, sped away over the fields with the doctor intact, following the fox and hounds. After a very exciting chase for the fox, more so for the doctor, the fox was caught. No sooner had the hounds caught the fox, the doctor arrived, and his conscience worried, he dismounted and took the fox from its captors, bringing it back to safety. After the chase the doctor procured a necklace chain from a Hunterstown jeweler and took the fox to York.—Gazette & Daily.

ORDERED GIRL EXAMINED

Friday, Judge McPherson handed down an order directing Doctors J. P. Dalby and J. McCrea Dickson, Gettysburg, to examine the mental and physical condition of Marie Shenk, chief beneficiary under the will of the late Sampson Albert, on Sunday at her home in Carlisle. The Court likewise directed in the order that should these doctors disagree as to the condition of Marie Shenk, Miss Shenk be allowed to call in a third doctor for a consultation with the other two and the consensus of opinion of the majority of the two will be recognized by the court.

Argument on the case brought by Phoebe Shelby, a sister, and George Albert, a brother of the deceased man, in an effort to dispose of Marie Shenk as executrix and beneficiary of the estate which amounted to almost $50,000, was to have been heard on January 2. Marie Shenk is alleged to have pleaded sickness and again on January 4 she stated that she was still indisposed. It was then that the attorney for the brother and sister asked that the court appoint the physicians. The argument on the case was postponed until January 11, when the doctors made their report.

Of this amount $20,018.75 came from the general fund and $25,112.50, by reason of the Woodruff salary law. The statement shows there were 215 teachers in the public schools of the county and 7,135 pupils. First payments to the various school districts are now being made from the fund appropriated by the 1919 legislature.

War—Made by Chemists and Engineers on Women, Children and Old Folk

By JOHN GALSWORTHY, in New York Times.

Last, and by far the most insidious and sinister factor in the international situation, is the emergence of new methods of warfare, which involve the wholesale destruction of civilian population. To be quite frank, we may dismiss at once any hope of a new patriotism, of any wide feeling that self-interest is identical with the good of other nations and the world at large, so long as the fear of wholesale civilian destruction hangs over the peoples of each country.

If the nations, at this point of the world's history, cannot agree to debar chemists and scientists from pursuing researches for destructive purposes; if they will not officially put the air and the depths of water out of court in warfare; guarantee the immunity of merchant shipping in time of war, so that blockades are no longer possible; and take definite measures to see that all these international prohibitions are not secretly evaded; then, we may call what conferences on disarmament we like, and limit the number of men and ships as we please; we may write and we may talk about a "new patriotism" and "world salvation," and it will all be just beating the air.

Limitation of outworn weapons, however desirable to ease our pockets for the moment, and idealistic talk about world-citizenship are not going to lessen the real danger of our times. Nor will it subdue in the individuals of each nation the half-conscious fear and distrust of other nations, based on knowledge that by devilish invention they may some day be suddenly poisoned or starved out of existence wholesale.

The truth, not yet really grasped, even by thinkers, in spite of all the warnings of the last war, is this: War will no longer be made by soldiers on soldiers in manful fashion, but by politicians, chemists and engineers, on women, children and old folk. War threatens civilians as it never threatened them before. It has become sheer blackguardism.

If the nations cannot nip such a grotesque development in the bud, and so remove the dread of it, small at present, but insidious, ever spreading, and perfectly justified, from the minds of us all—what earthly hope is there of a new patriotism, which shall feel for this whole beautiful world what we now feel for our lovely corner of it?

"Great Monetary Loss Can Be of No Consideration When Compared—"

By CHARLES M. SCHWAB, American Steel-Maker.

It was stated at some of the sessions of the recent League of Nations meeting in Geneva—it has often been carelessly suggested in the press—that the flame of war is in great measure kept alive by those interested in the private building of naval ships and the manufacturers of munitions of war. I can, of course, speak only for myself, but I believe I know and express the sentiments of others placed in similar positions to mine when I say this:

I am at the head of the largest war materials manufacturing works in the world. The shipyards of my company build more naval ships than are built in any other yards under one management in the United States.

But I have been thrilled beyond expression, as has every good American, by that brilliant and statesmanlike scheme laid before the conference in Washington by Secretary Hughes. The carrying out of that plan may involve great monetary loss in some quarters, but such a thing as financial loss can be of no consideration when compared to the incalculable boon to mankind which would be involved in the realization of that magnificent plan.

National Campaign Committee of All Parties Should Be Abolished

By J. HAMILTON LEWIS, Former U. S. Senator From Illinois.

The national campaign committee of all political parties ought to at once be abolished. There is now no need for any of them in the national elections. The state election machinery in each state in every presidential election conducts the elections which choose president, senators and congressmen at the same time the state officials are elected. The day has gone when there was conflict and jealousies between state and nation and their officers, as well as when there were different dates for state and national elections.

We should now have only state committees, aided by a campaign committee chosen by the candidates for president and vice president as they are named by the conventions, this campaign committee to merely co-operate with the state committee in each state.

This annual party dissension in all parties in off years over the chairman of a presidential campaign committee is as profitless as a mutiny in an army preparing for war over the selection of a drill sergeant for dress parade.

The Average American Eats Exactly 2,664 Pounds of Food Each Year

By JAMES J. DAVIS, U. S. Secretary of Labor.

Do you know that the average American eats more than a ton of food every year? The exact figures are 2,664 pounds per man per year. That is a costly item. We certainly don't stint ourselves.

And does this Gargantuan appetite really make for national health? Is it any better for the body than it is for the pocketbook? I notice by these same figures from the bureau of labor statistics that the average American wage-earner manages to keep the spark of life in his body on 1,775 pounds of food a year. The A. E. F. ration was 1,540 pounds per man per year, and if I recollect rightly the American soldier did some pretty fair work on that allowance.

The medical authorities may make what they please of these figures, but I notice that the average Japanese consumes 905 pounds of food per annum. The average Jap adult gets 30 pounds of fruit, as against 250 pounds, the average with us.

WITH THE SPOON

"Many things happen between the cup and the lip."

ARE you quite sure that you hold your spoon in the correct manner? It does seem a funny thing that so much depends on such an apparently unimportant matter. But you know yourself that if you see a person holding a spoon as you would a screwdriver or a garden spade, with the palm of the hand over the top and the thumb and fingers clasped on the reverse side, you would immediately put him down as lacking in good breeding. On the contrary, if you see a man or woman holding a spoon in an extremely mischievous manner, with the little finger and ring finger held as far away from the other fingers as possible, you immediately assume that that person is trying to impress you with his extreme daintiness.

Properly, the spoon should be held between thumb and first finger, resting on the middle finger. Be careful not to hold it too far down toward the bowl.

Always raise the spoon to your mouth so that the side of the bowl touches the mouth, and not the point of the spoon. To do this one has to bring the spoon up at right angles, in a very awkward manner. Remember that you should never drink or sip from the tip of the spoon. Liquids should be taken from the side of the spoon, without slipping them and without actually putting the entire spoon into the mouth. Solids should be taken by laying the spoon between the lips and taking the contents into the mouth without the polishing process that is characteristic of children when they especially enjoy what they are eating.

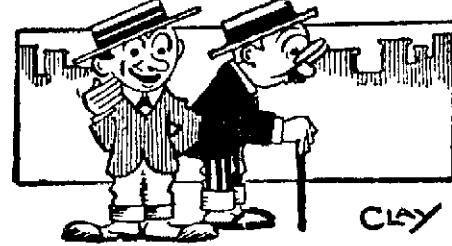

Soft-boiled eggs are eaten with a spoon from the shell. It is a good idea to have bone egg spoons that do not discolor with the action of the egg, as do silver spoons.

Bouillon, when served in cups; tea, coffee and other beverages served in cups, should be taken with the spoon only enough to make sure that they are properly seasoned and that they are cool enough to drink. It is extremely bad form to consume the entire cupful with sips of the spoon.

No vegetables should be taken with a spoon that can possibly be eaten with a fork. To be sure, such things as thin-stewed tomatoes, served in side saucers, cannot very easily be managed with a fork. Perhaps the right way to prepare them for the table is in solid enough form so that they can be managed without a spoon. Peas should not be eaten with a spoon, and for that reason it is no longer considered best to serve them cooked in milk. Many persons insist that ice cream is a fork food, and not spoon food. However, if spoons are served with this dainty, do not hesitate to use them. There is really nothing very bad form about using a spoon, and a great many persons do who are beyond reproach in table manners.

Facts about your name: its history, meaning, whence it was derived, significance, your lucky day and lucky jewel

OLIVE

OLIVE, the sign of peace and joy, is one of the few feminine names which has no early Greek or Latin origin. It first appears in Italy, the land of the olive tree, whose branches have come to be the symbol of peace and harmony. Etymologists claim that, though it is closely associated with the Italian Oliviero, it would never have achieved popularity as a name but for the Teutonic Olaf (forefather's relic).

Oliviero, the paladin of Charlemagne, was most frequently in use among all those of the circle of paladins, and gave rise to the saying which has since become a proverb, "giving a Rowland for an Oliver." English knights of high, chivalrous repute frequently bore the name of Oliver until the eminence of the Protector made "Old Noll" a word of hate among the cavaliers.

The feminine form, Olive, which was invented in Italy, was brought to England by the influx of Italian literature in the Tudor reign. Its form was then Olivia, and as such it still has great vogue, especially in literature and poetry. Goldsmith calls the unfortunate daughter of his indomitable "Vicar of Wakefield" Olivia, and many other heroines of that literary period bore the same name.

It is only of recent years that Olive gained preference over Olivia. The change came about in England, but was not long in reaching this country, and now Olive is a popular and fashionable name here.

The fire opal is the gem assigned to her. Its glowing, ever-changing color promises good fortune to her or whom it is intended as an ornament and a talisman. The chrysanthemum is her flower. Wednesday is her lucky day and three her lucky number.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ACADEMY"

IN THE days when Athens was regarded as the seat of learning for the entire world, the suburb, Akademia—so-called because it was supposed originally to have belonged to the Attic hero, Akademos—was used by the citizens as a gymnasium and conference ground. It was here that Plato purchased a small garden, in which he opened his school and taught his philosophy for more than 50 years, his scholars receiving the name of "Academics." Because of this, other public places designed for the gathering of the learned and the teaching of the young have been known as academies.

Cicero also had a villa or country-seat near Puteoli, which he called Akademia, in memory of the suburb of Athens, and it was this name which inspired him to name his famous work, "Quaestiones Academicae." Possibly because of this fact Italy has had the honor of founding more academies of world-wide renown than any other nation, though the Academie Francaise, founded by Cardinal Richelieu in 1635, stands at the top of the list today.

forgot to play dead. He just stood still and stared, but in a jiffy down he tumbled on the floor.

"We were in Mr. Coon's house when they opened the bag, but he did not stop. Out of the door he flew, and when I stopped laughing Mr. Possum was gone also. But I don't care; it was the funniest sight I ever saw, and I was well paid. And any time you want any help, Mr. Bear, I shall be glad to oblige you."

Mr. Bear thanked him, and when he went to sleep that night he said to himself: "I guess Mr. Coon and Mr. Possum have had a lesson that will last them awhile and a fellow can sleep in peace, even if he has a pantry filled with preserves."

(Copyright.)

MR. BEAR'S TRICK

MR. BEAR had been bothered a great deal by having his vegetables and fruits that he had preserved stolen from his pantry while he slept.

He felt quite sure it was Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon that helped themselves, but he had never been able to keep awake and catch them.

Often he had tried, but every time he had fallen asleep, and when he awoke they had been there and taken with them some of his stores.

Mr. Bear was a good-natured fellow and he disliked to harm anyone, so he set to work to think of a plan by which he could punish them and stop them from taking his preserves without catching them himself.

But, think as he would, there was only one plan that came to his mind, and, while it was dangerous for Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon if they did not get away, he decided to risk it, or rather, let them take the risk.

One night Mr. Bear awoke, hearing some one running, and up he jumped from his hiding place, where he had again fallen asleep, and ran off in the direction he had heard the noise.

But instead of catching anyone he stumbled over a big bag of goodies which Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon had dropped when they heard him coming, and then it was that Mr. Bear made up his mind to try his scheme.

He went out of the woods and over to the farm not far away, and there he hid under some bushes and waited for Mr. Dog to come that way.

"Mr. Dog," he said, when he came along, "I have never harmed you and I shall not now but you must do something for me tonight or I shall be very cross."

"Mr. Bear had one paw on Mr. Dog and his teeth were not the sort Mr.

Dog wished to test as to their sharpness, so he meekly asked what it was that Mr. Bear wished him to do and said he was always willing to oblige a friend.

"I want you to do something that will give you a great deal of sport as well as help me, if you follow my plan," said Mr. Bear, as he walked away with Mr. Dog tucked under one arm.

All day he kept Mr. Dog in his house, but he was so polite and gave him such nice things to eat that Mr. Dog was glad he had carried him off.

When it was dark Mr. Bear took Mr. Dog to the place in the woods where Mr. Coon and Mr. Possum had dropped the bag and put him inside with some stones which he had wrapped well, so Mr. Dog would not be hurt.

"Now, do not move or bark until they untie the bag," cautioned Mr. Bear, "and if you do not see two astonished faces when you jump out my name is not Johnnie Bear."

Mr. Bear trotted off home and pretty soon along came Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon looking for the bag. "If he did not find it," said Mr. Possum, "it will be along here somewhere."

"Here it is," said Mr. Coon, spying the bag, and, picking it up, he tossed it over one shoulder and off they ran.

"Did you catch either of them?" asked Mr. Bear the next day when Mr. Dog went around to tell him about it.

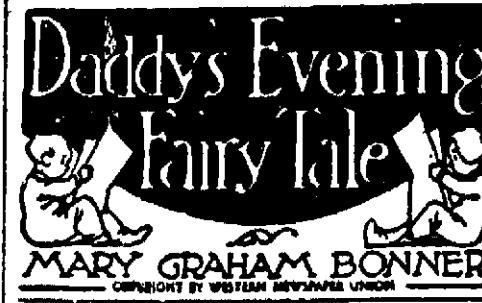

"No, I laughed so long that when I stopped they were both gone," said Mr. Dog. "Mr. Coon's mouth flew open with surprise and he tumbled over backward as I jumped out when he untied the bag. Mr. Possum almost

ANIMAL WAYS.

Now I wanted to see the Ant-Eater. I sent word that I was going to see him, and the keeper told me, when I arrived, that the Ant-Eater was ready to see his caller.

He had been expecting me, and so had not gone out, which was very polite of the Ant-Eater, now, wasn't it?

He has a very long snout—very, very long and thin. His mouth is no more than a tiny, narrow slit, and when he is in his South American home he eats only ants. In the zoo he eats chopped meat and eggs and also laps up milk with his long thin tongue.

And now I shall translate for you his talk—which the keeper helped me to translate:

"When I'm free," the Ant-Eater said, "my two end points are all important. First of all I free the country of many naughty ants. I enjoy the good work I do. Many do enjoy work, you know—the Ant-Eater is among them. With my bushy tail I swish up the ants and get them together in large numbers.

"But that is not the only way my tail is useful. I use it in the hot summer time to fan myself with and to keep off the flies that might come to have a chat on my back.

"You know, flies don't care where they stop for a talk—or a rest—it might be on a person's forehead. It makes no difference to them!

"And my tail can also be used as an umbrella. I can take a nap and cover myself up with my tail and not bother to get up for a little shower and go in my house."

"My tail keeps the rain off my body and I shake it off my tail when I awaken."

"If you're going to talk about your two important ends," said a strange looking lizard, "you should think of me. For I am more important at either end and at both ends than you ever dreamed of being.

"My name is the Stumped-Tailed or Two-Headed or Shingle-Back Lizard. Three names have I and two heads, and that is as much as any creature should ask for or receive!

"My back does look like a shingle roof with the shingles laid over each other—you know what I mean. But most important is the fact that I have two heads. By each I have a pair of little legs, and they're made just alike.

"I am from Australia, you know. If you don't know it, you do now. This is the most interesting thing of all. I can travel either way—yes, I can go in either direction, forward or backward, and whenever I want to change my mind I don't have to turn around—I just start going backwards, which at once becomes forward for me!

"And here," said the Two-Headed Lizard, "is my little brother."

There, sure enough, was another just like him, and when the keeper took them both up in his hands, each with two heads turned toward me, I didn't know whether I was looking at four animals or two.

But then I had to hurry over to see Mrs. Lemur Monkey from Madagascar, and her young twins. There they were curled around her back, which is the way monkeys, both big and small, carry their babies when they are climbing in their tree homes or even in the zoo.

All mother monkeys are very, very devoted to their young, and little Mother Lemur was certainly no exception. The children were sleepy little fuzzy dears, and Mother Lemur had no time for me. So I listened to her as she talked to them in her sweet little squealing voice, and later on I heard a strange kind of monkey-singing. It was Mother Lemur singing a tree-cradle song to her babies as she held them in her loving monkey arms.

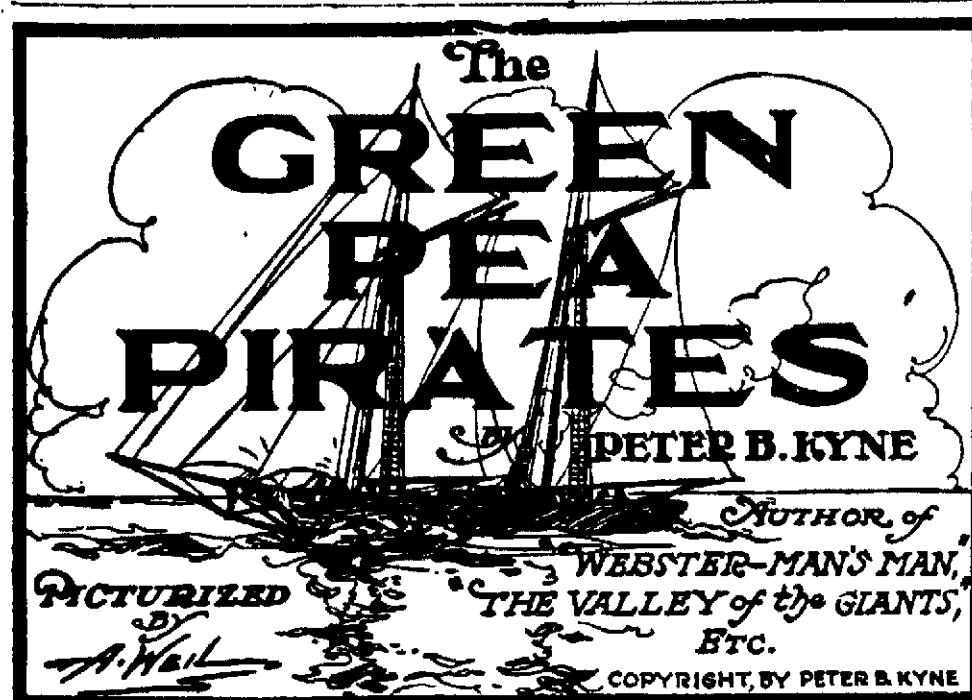

As far as I could make it out, this was her song:

Little ones, little ones, I love you so,
"Till keep you safe from every foe,
I'll watch you and guard you, you need have no fears,
For I'll never let harm touch my precious dears.
My darlings, my darlings, I love you so dearly,
That no lullaby song can describe my love really,
But you can feel how I love you and that tells you more
Than if I should sing these words over and over.
Ah, little ones, little ones, I love you so,
I'll keep you safe from every foe!"

And the twins snuggled closer and went sound to sleep!

In Their Tree Homes.

"There's one thing more that we mustn't neglect," warned Mr. Gibney before the meeting broke up. "We've got to run this little vessel into some dog-hole where there's a nice beach and smooth water, and change her name. I notice that her old name Reina Maria is screwed into her bows and across her stern in raised gilt letters, contrary to law and custom. We'll snip 'em off, sandpaper every spot where there's a letter, and repaint it; after which we'll rig up a stagin' over her bow and stern, and cut her new name, 'Maggie II,' right into her plankin'. Nobody'll ever suspect her name's been changed. I notice that the official letters and numbers cut into her main beam is F-C-P—0957. I'll change the F to E, and the C to O, and the P to R. A handy man with a wood chisel can do lots of things. He can change those nines to eights, the five to a six, and the seven to a nine. I've seen 't done before. Then we'll rig a foretopmast and a spinnaker boom on her, and bend a fisherman's staysail. Nothing like it when you're sailing a little off the wind. Scraggs, you have the papers of the old Maggie, and we all have our licenses regular enough. Dig up the old papers, Scraggs, and I'll doctor 'em up to fit the Maggie II. As for our armament, we'll dismount the guns and stow 'em away in the hold until we get down on the Colombian coast, and while we're lying in Panama repairing the holes where my shots went through her, and puttin' new planks in her decks where the old plankin' has been scored by shrapnel, those parakeets will think we're as peaceful as chipmunks. Better look over your supplies, McGuffey, and see if there's any paint aboard. I'd just as lief give the old girl a different dress before we drop anchor in Panama."

"Gib," said Captain Scraggs, earnestly, "I'll keel-haul and shull-drag the man that says you ain't got a great head."

"By the lord," supplemented McGuffey, "you have."

The commodore smiled and tapped his frontal bone with his forefinger. "Imagination, my lads, imagination," he said, and reached for the last of the punch.

Exactly three weeks from the date of the naval battle which took place off the Coronado islands, and whereby Mr. Gibney became commodore and managing owner of the erstwhile Mexican coast patrol schooner Reina Maria, that vessel sailed out of the harbor of Panama completely rejuvenated. Not a scar on her shapely lines gave evidence of the sanguinary engagement through which she had passed.

Mr. Gibney had her painted a creamy white with a dark blue waterline. She had had her bottom cleaned and scraped and the copper sheathing overhauled and patched up. Her sails had been overhauled, inspected, and repaired wherever necessary, and in order to be on the safe side, Mr. Gibney, upon motion duly made by him and seconded by McGuffey (to whom the seconding of the Gibney motions had developed into a habit), purchased an extra suit of new sails. The engines were overhauled by the faithful McGuffey and a large store of distillate stored in the hold. Captain Scraggs, with his old-time aversion to expense, made a motion (which was seconded by McGuffey before he had taken time to consider its import) providing for the abolition of the office of chief engineer while the Maggie II was under sail, at which time the chief ex-officio was to hold himself under the orders of the commodore and be transferred to the deck department if necessary. Mr. Gibney approved the measure and it went into effect. Only on entering or leaving a port, or in case of chase by an enemy, were the engines to be used, and McGuffey was warned to be extremely saving of his distillate.

Mr. Gibney made a splendid job of changing the vessel's name, and as she chugged lazily out of Panama bay and lifted to the long ground-swell of the Pacific, it is doubtful if even her late Mexican commander would have recognized her. She was indeed a beautiful craft, and Commodore Gibney's heart swelled with pride as he stood aft, conning the man at the wheel, and looked her over. It seemed like a sacrilege now, when he reflected how he had trained the gun of the old Maggie on her that day off the Coronados, and it seemed to him now even a greater sacrilege to have brazenly planned to enter her as a privateer in the struggles of the republic of Colombia. The past tense is used advisedly, for that project was now entirely off, much to the secret delight of Captain Scraggs, who, if the hero of one naval engagement, was not anxious to take part in another. In Panama the freebooters of the Maggie II learned that during Mr. Gibney's absence on his filibustering trip the Colombian revolutionists had risen and struck their blow. After the fashion of a hot-headed and impetuous people, they had entered the contest absolutely untrained. As a result, the war had lasted just two weeks, the leaders had been incontinentally shot, and the white-winged dove of peace had once more spread her pinions along the borders of the Gold coast.

Commodore Gibney was disgusted beyond measure, and at a special meeting of the syndicate, called in the cabin of the Maggie II that same evening, it was finally decided that they should embark on an indefinite trading cruise in the South seas, or until such time as it seemed their services must be required to free a downtrodden people from a tyrant's yoke.

Captain Scraggs and McGuffey had never been in the South seas, but they had heard that a fair margin of profit was to be wrung from trade in copra, shell, coconuts, and kindred tropical products. They so expressed themselves. To this suggestion, however, Commodore Gibney waved a deprecating paw.

"Legitimate tradin', boys," he said. "Is a nice, sane, healthy business, but the profits is slow. What we want is quick profits, and while it ain't set down in black and white, one of the principal objects of this syndicate is to lead a life of wild adventure. In tradin', there ain't no adventure to speak of. We ought to do a little black-birdin', or raid some of those Jap pearl fisheries off the northern coast of Formosa."

"But we'll be chased by real gun-boats if we do that," objected Captain Scraggs. "Those Jap gunboats shoot to kill. Can't you think of somethin' else, Gib?"

"Well," said Mr. Gibney, "for a starter, I can. Suppose we just head straight for Kandavu Island in the Fijis, and scheme around for a cargo of black coral? It's only worth about fifty dollars a pound. Kandavu lays somewhere in latitude 22 south, longitude 178 west, and when I was there last it was fair reekin' with cannibal savages. But there's tons of black coral there, and nobody's ever been able to sneak in and get away with it. Every time a boat used to land at Kandavu, the native niggers would have a white-man stew down on the beach, and it's got so that skippers give the island a wide berth."

"Gib, my dear boy," chattered Captain Scraggs, "I'm a man of peace and I—I—"

"Scraggsy, old stick-in-the-mud," said Mr. Gibney, laying an affectionate hand on the skipper's shoulder, "you're nothin' of the sort. You're a fightin' tarantula, and nobody knows it better'n Adelbert P. Gibney. I've seen you in action, Scraggsy. Remember that. It's all right for you to say you're a man of peace and advise me and McGuffey to keep out of the track of trouble, but we know that away down low you're goin' around lookin' for blood, and that once you're up agin the enemy, you never bat an eyelash. Eh, McGuffey?"

McGuffey nodded; whereupon, Captain Scraggs, making but a poor effort to conceal the pleasure which Mr. Gibney's rude compliment afforded him, turned to the rail, glanced seaward, and started to walk away to attend to some trifling detail connected with the boat falls.

"All right, Gib, my lad," he said, affecting to resign himself to the inevitable, "have it your own way. You're a commodore and I'm only a plain captain, but I'll follow wherever you lead. I'll go as far as the next man and we'll glory that black coral if we have to slaughter every man, woman and child on the island. Only, when we're sizzlin' in a pot don't you up and say I never warned you, because I did. How d'ye propose intimidatin' the natives, Gib?"

"Scraggsy," said the commodore, solemnly, "we've waged a private war agin a friendly nation, licked 'em and helped ourselves to their ship. We've changed her name and rig and her official number and letters and we're sailin' under bogus papers. That makes us pirates, and the old Maggie burgee floatin' at the fore ain't nothin' more nor less than the Jolly Roger. All right! Let's be pirates. Who cares? When we slip into M'galao harbor we'll invite the king and his head men aboard for dinner. We'll go, 'em drunk, clap 'em in double irons, and surrender 'em to their weepin' subjects when they've filled the hold of the Maggie II with black coral. If they refuse to come aboard we'll shell the bush with that long gun and the Maxim rapid-fire guns we've got below decks. That'll scare 'em so they'll leave us alone and we can help ourselves to the coral."

"Like playin' post-office," was McGuffey's comment.

The commodore smiled. "I thought you boys would see it that way. Now tomorrow I'm going ashore to buy three divin' outfits and lay in a big stock of provisions for the voyage. In the meantime, while the carpenters are gettin' the ship into shape, we'll leave the first mate in charge while we go ashore and have a good time. I've seen worse places than Panama."

As a result of this conference Mr. Gibney's suggestions were acted upon, and they contrived to make their brief stay in Panama very agreeable. They inspected the work on the canal, marveled at the stupendous engineering in the Culebra Cut, drank a little, gambled a little, McGuffey whipped a bartender. He was ordered arrested, and six spiggoty little policemen, sent to arrest him, were also thrashed. The reserves were called out and a riot ensued. Mr. Gibney, following the motto of the syndicate, I. e.,

All for one and one for all—

mixed in the conflict and presently found himself in durance vile. Captain Scraggs, luckily, forgot the motto and escaped, but inasmuch as he was on hand next morning to pay a fine of thirty pesos levied against each of the culprits, he was instantly forgiven. Mr. Gibney vowed that if a United States cruiser didn't happen to be lying in the roadstead, he would have shelled the town in retaliation.

But eventually the days passed, and the Maggie II, well found and ready for sea, shook out her sails to a fair breeze and sailed away for Kandavu. She kept well to the southwest until she struck the southeast trades, when she swung around on her course, headed straight for her destination. It was a pleasant voyage, devoid of incident, and the health of all hands was excellent. Mr. Gibney took daily observations, and was particular to make daily entries in his log when he, Scraggs, and McGuffey were not playing cribbage, a game of which all three were passionately fond.

On the afternoon of the twenty-ninth day after leaving Panama the lookout reported land. Through his glasses Mr. Gibney made out a cluster of tall palms at the southerly end of the island, and as the schooner held lazily on her course he could discern the white breakers foaming over the reefs that guarded the entrance to the harbor.

"That's Kandavu, all right," announced the commodore. "I was there in '89 with Bill McGinty in the schooner Dashin' Wave. There's the entrance to the harbor, with the Esk reefs to the north and the Pearl reefs to the south. The channel's very narrow—not more than three cables, if it's that, but there's plenty of water and a good muddy bottom that'll hold. McGuffey, lad, better run below and tune up your engines. It's too dangerous a passage on an ebb-tide for a sailin' vessel, so we'll run in under the power. Scraggsy, stand by and when I give the word have your crew shorten sail."

Within a few minutes a long white streak opened up in the wake of the schooner, announcing that McGuffey's engines were doing duty, and a nice breeze springing up two points aft the beam, the Maggie heeled over and fairly flew through the water. Mr. Gibney smiled an ecstatic smile as he took the wheel and guided the schooner through the channel. He rounded her up in twelve fathoms, and within five minutes every stitch of canvas was clewed down hard and fast. The sun was setting as they dropped anchor, and Mr. Gibney had lanterns hung along the sail so that it would be impossible for any craft to approach the schooner and board her without being seen. Also the watch on deck that night carried Mauser rifles, six-shooters, and cutlasses. Mr. Gibney was taking no chances.

CHAPTER XI.

"Now, boys," announced Commodore Gibney, as he sat at the head of the officers' mess at breakfast next morning, "there'll be a lot of canoes paddling off to visit us within the hour, so whatever you do, don't allow more than two of these cannibals aboard the schooner at the same time. Make 'em keep their weapons in the canoes with 'em, and at the first sign of trouble shoot 'em down like dogs. It may be that these precautions ain't necessary, but when I was here twenty years ago it was all the rage to kill a white man and eat him. Maybe times has changed, but the harbor and the coast looks just as wild and lonely as they ever did, and I didn't see no sign of missionary when we dropped hook last night. So don't take no chances."

All hands promised that they would take extreme care, to the end that their precious persons might remain intact, so Mr. Gibney finished his cup of coffee at a gulp and went on deck.

The Kandavu aborigines were not long in putting in an appearance. Even as Mr. Gibney came on deck half a dozen canoes shot out from the beach. Mr. Gibney immediately piped all hands on deck, armed them, and nonchalantly awaited the approach of what might or might not turn out to be an enemy.

When the flotilla was within pistol shot of the schooner Mr. Gibney stepped to the rail and motioned them back. Immediately the natives ceased paddling, and a wild-looking fellow stood up in the forward canoe. After the manner of his kind he had all his life soused his head in lime-water when making his savage toilette, and as a result his shock of black hair stood on end and bulged out like a crowded haystack. He was naked, of course, and in his hand he held a huge war club.

"That feller'd eat a rattlesnake," gasped Captain Scraggs. "Shoot him, Gib, if he bats an eye."

"Shut up," said the commodore, a trifle testily; "that's the number-one nigger, who does the talkin'. Hello, boy."

"Hello, cap'n," replied the savage, and salaamed gravely. "You likee buy chicken, buy pig? Maybe you say come 'board, I talk. Me very good friend white master."

"Bless my sweet-scented soul!" gasped the commodore. "What want them missionaries do next? Cut off my ears if this nigger ain't civilized!" He beckoned to the canoe and it shot alongside, and its brown crew came climbing over the rail of the Maggie II.

Mr. Gibney met the spokesman at the rail and they rubbed noses very solemnly, after the manner of salutation in Kandavu. Captain Scraggs bustled forward, full of importance.

"Introduce me, Gib," he said amiably, and then, while Mr. Gibney favored him with a sour glance, Captain Scraggs stuck out his hand and shook briskly with the native.

"Happy to make your acquaintance," he said. "Scraggs is my name, sir. Shake hands with McGuffey, our chief engineer. Hope you left all the folks at home well. What'd you say your name was?"

The islander hadn't said his name was anything, but he grinned now and replied that it was Tabu-Tabu.

"Well, my bucks," muttered McGuffey, who always drew the color line, "I'm glad to hear that. But you ain't the only thing that's taboo around this packet. You can jest check that war club with the first mate, pendin' our better acquaintance. Hand it over, you black beggar, or I'll hit you a swat in the ear that'll hurt all your relations. And hereafter, Scraggsy, just keep your nigger friends to yourself. I ain't waxin' effusive over this savage, and it's agin my principles ever to shake hands with a colored man. This chap's a d-d ugly customer, and you take my word for it."

Tabu-Tabu grinned again, walked to the rail, and tossed his war club down into the canoe. "Me good missionary boy," he said, rather humbly. "McGuffey, my dear boy," protested Captain Scraggs, "don't be so doggone rude. You might hurt this poor lad's feelin's. Of course he's only a simple native nigger, but even a dawg has feelin's. You—"

"A-r-r-r-h!" snarled McGuffey. "You two belay talkin' and snappin' at each other," commanded Mr. Gibney, "and leave all bargainin' to me. This boy is all right and we'll get along first rate if you two just haul ship and do somethin' useful besides buttin' in on your superior officer. Come along, Tabu-Tabu. Makee little eat down in cabin. You talkee captain."

"Gib, my dear boy," sputtered Captain Scraggs, bursting with curiosity, following the commodore's reappearance on deck, "whatever's in the wind?"

"Money—fortune," said Mr. Gibney, solemnly.

McGuffey edged up and eyed the commodore seriously. "Sure there ain't a little fightin' mixed up in it?" he asked.

"Not a bit of it," replied Mr. Gibney. "You're as safe on Kandavu as if you was in church. This Tabu kid is sort of prime minister to the king, with a heap of influence at court. The crew of a British cruiser stole him for a galley police when he was a kid, and he got civilized and learned to talk English. He was a cannibal in them days, but the chaplain aboard showed him how foolish it was to do such things, and finally Tabu-Tabu got religion and asked as a special favor to be allowed to return to Kandavu to civilize his people. As a result of Tabu-Tabu's efforts, he tells me the king has concluded that when he eats a white man he's flyin' in the face of his own interests, and most generally a gunboat comes along in a few months and shells the bush, and—well, anyhow, there ain't been a barbecue on Kandavu for ten years. It's a capital crime to eat a man now, and punishable by hollin' the offender alive in palm oil."

"Well," rumbled McGuffey, "this Tabu-Tabu don't look much like a preacher, if you ask me. But how about this black coral?"

"Oh, I've ribbed up a deal with him," said Mr. Gibney. "He'll see that we get all the trade we can lug away. We're the first vessel that's touched here in two years, and they have a thunderin' lot of stuff on hand. Tabu's gone ashore to talk the king into doin' business with us. If he consents, we'll have him and Tabu-Tabu and three or four of the sub-chiefs aboard for dinner, or else he'll invite us ashore for a big feed, and we'll have to go."

"Supposin' the king don't care to have any truck with us?" inquired McGuffey, anxiously.

"In that case, Mac," replied the commodore with a smile, "we'll just naturally shell him out of house and home."

"Well, then," said McGuffey, "let's get the guns ready. Somethin' tells me these people ain't to be trusted, and I'm tellin' you right now, Gib, I won't sleep well tonight unless them two quarter gatlings and the Maxim-Vickers rapid-fire guns is mounted and ready for business."

"All right, Mac," replied Mr. Gibney, in the tone one uses when humoring a baby. "Set 'em up if it'll make you feel more cheerful. Still, I don't see why you want to go actin' so foolish over nothin'."

"Well, Gib," replied the engineer, "I may be crazy, but I ain't no fool, and if there's a dead whale around the ship, I can come pretty near smellin' it."

McGuffey Contented Himself by Parading Backward and Forward Across the Fo' Castle Head.

It, I tell you, Gib, that Tabu-Tabu nigger had a look in his eye for all the world like a cur dog lickin' a bone. I ain't takin' no chances. My old man used to say: 'Bart, whatever you do, allers have an anchor out to windward.'

"By the left hind leg of the Great Sacred Bull," snapped Captain Scraggs, "if you ain't enough to precipitate war."

"War," replied McGuffey, "is my long suit—particularly war with native niggers. I just naturally crave to punch the ear of anything darker than a Portugee. Remember how I cleaned out the police department of Panama?"

"Mount the guns if you're goin' to, Mac. If not, for the love of the Lord don't be demoralizin' the crew with this talk of war. All I ask is that you set the guns after I've finished my business here with Tabu-Tabu. He's been on a war vessel, and knows what guns are, and if he saw you mountin' them it might break up our friendly relations. He'll think we don't trust him."

"Well, we don't," replied McGuffey, doggedly.

"Well, we do," snapped Captain Scraggs.

There is always something connected with the use of that pronoun of kings which eats like a canker at the heart of men of the McGuffey breed. That officer now spat on the deck, in defiance of the rules of his superior officers, and glared at Captain Scraggs.

"Speak for yourself, you miserable little wart," he roared. "If you include me on that cannibals' visitin' list, and go to contradictin' me agin, I'll—"

"Mac," interrupted Mr. Gibney, angrily, "control yourself. It's agin the rules to have rag-chewin' and back-bitin' on the Maggie II. Remember our motto: 'All for one and one for all'!"

"Here comes that sneakin' bushy-headed murderer back to the vessel," interrupted McGuffey. "I wonder what devilment he's up to now."

Mr. McGuffey was partly right, for in a few minutes Tabu-Tabu came alongside, climbed aboard, and salaamed. Mr. Gibney, fearful of McGuffey's inability to control his antipathy for the race, beckoned Captain Scraggs and Tabu-Tabu to follow him down into the cabin. Meanwhile, McGuffey contented himself by parading backward and forward across the fo' castle head with a Mauser rifle in the hollow of his arm and his person fairly bristling with pistols and cutlasses. Whenever one of the flotilla of canoes have to at a respectful distance, showed signs of crossing an imaginary deadline drawn by McGuffey, he would point his rifle at them and swear horribly. He scowled at Tabu-Tabu when that individual finally emerged from the conference with Mr. Gibney and Scraggs and went over the side to his waiting canoe.

No man is big enough to do a lot of things and do them well enough to last. When you take him and spread him over a lot of surface, he makes a layer too thin to form any impression. But if you take him and hammer him with the sledge of a mighty purpose, even if there is not more than enough of him to fill a bean-shooter, he will make an impression when he strikes.—D. L. Moody.

A DESSERT FOR EVERY DAY

Here is a dessert for each working day, and on Sunday ice cream and cake or a pie of some kind, which may be prepared on Saturday, may be served. On the busiest day try:

Fifteen-Minute Pudding.—Make a batter, using one cupful of flour, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder and enough good milk or fresh buttermilk to make a drop batter. Butter custard cups and drop in a teaspoonful of the batter, then add two tablespoonfuls of canned cherries, juice and all. Add another tablespoonful of batter and fill all the cups about half or two-thirds full. Set in a pan, surround with boiling water and cover closely. Boil for fifteen minutes without uncovering. Be sure there is enough water but not enough to boil over into the cups. Serve with cream and sugar.

Lemon Meringue.—Take one pint of milk, three ounces of sugar, one cupful of the bread crumbs, two eggs, the juice and rind of a lemon. Mix all ingredients and cook slowly until well set, baking in a deep pie plate. Set away to cool, cover with a meringue and serve cold.

Edinburgh Pudding.—Take one-half pound of oatmeal, one cupful of thick cooked custard flavored with vanilla, one and one-half pints of water, one-quarter of a cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt and two ounces of coconut. Cook the oatmeal, salt and water until well cooked. Cool, turn in the custard and pour into molds. Serve when molded, sprinkled with coconut and sugar, with cream.

Snow Jelly.—Make jellies of pineapple, raspberry and lemon. Arrange in layers the lemon, then raspberry and when the pineapple is thickening whip it until frothy, pile this on top of the raspberry jelly. Chill before serving.

Mince, pumpkin or apple pie may be served on a day that the dinner is rather light.

The difference between a precious stone and a common stone is not an essential difference—not a difference of substance, but arrangement of the particles—the crystallization. In substance the coal and the diamond are one, but in form and effect how widely they differ. The pearl contains nothing that is not found in the coarsest oyster shell. Two men have the same thoughts; they use about the same words in expressing them, yet with the one the product is real literature, with the other it is a platitude.—John Burroughs.

SEASONABLE IDEAS

Cakes and cookies will be more delicious if they are allowed to age for a while before using.

Spice Cookies.—Cream one-third of a cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar, one well-beaten egg and one cupful of molasses, in which has been dissolved one teaspoonful of soda. Then add three and one-half cupfuls of flour, a little cinnamon, clove and nutmeg and one-half to a whole cupful of chopped raisins. A few chopped nuts make an improvement. When well mixed drop by teaspoonfuls on buttered sheets and sprinkle with sugar.

Dutch Peppernuts.—Mix one and one-quarter pounds of brown sugar with two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon and one tablespoonful of cloves with one teaspoonful of baking powder. Into this stir three eggs and as much flour as it is possible to work in. Roll thin and cut in circles the size of a quarter; bake in a very slow oven. These little cakes will puff up and are delicious. Ice the flat sides. They will keep for months.

Cranberry Cake.—Cream one-half cupful of butter and one and one-half cupfuls of light brown sugar, add the well-beaten yolks of three eggs. Have ready and sifted two cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of soda, a teaspoonful each of cinnamon and nutmeg and one-half teaspoonful of cloves; add to the sugar and butter. Fold in one and one-half cupfuls of cranberries that have been cooked, put through a ricer and sweetened slightly, then the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Bake in two layers and ice, using some of the strained juice of the cranberry for flavor and color.

Honey Doughnuts.—Doughnuts made of honey and sour milk or cream will keep moist a long time. Take two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and one-half cupfuls of honey, one cupful of sour milk; if sour cream is used take half the butter, one teaspoonful of soda, three cupfuls of flour sifted with two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar. Fry in deep, hot fat.

Ezra Jacobs, of East Berlin, butchered a hog that tipped the beam at 414 lbs. Chas. L. Livingston, Reading township, slaughtered two porkers that dressed 461 and 338 lbs.

Henry Taylor, Brysonia, killed a 690-lb. hog, the dressed hams of which weighed 61 lbs. each.

James P. Staub, of Littlestown, killed two hogs which weighed 473 and 448 pounds.

M. A. L. Trostle, Littlestown, recently killed a hog which weighed 538 pounds, and B. E. Bickor one which weighed 462 pounds.

STATE COP'S MEMORY LAPSSES; WOULD PUT LOCAL PEOPLE IN HIS STORY TELLING CLASS

He came right down and turned around and went right back again! "Hello! ITEM Office? Well, where the blinkety blank did you get that dinged stuff you published about a state policeman? You'll swallow that all right!" bellowed somebody on the other end of the 'phone, who represented himself to be the power-that-be at state police headquarters, Gettysburg, on Friday, referring to the wild tale published in this column last week, as told by a state cop, of the capture of three men and the recovery of $105,000 near Hanover, two weeks ago.

The ITEM, realizing it was useless to argue over the 'phone, invited the trooper kindly to come to New Oxford that the matter might be sifted to the bottom. The cop came all right with great bluff and bluster. After attempting to tell us our business and saying he was out to uphold the good name of the State Police, we asked for and obtained Mrs. N. M. Dicks' permission to have her give the trooper a description of the cop who had concocted the wild tale in the Circle Cafe. And here's the funny part of the story:

Mrs. Dicks, Mr. and Mrs. Galt, of Tanoytown, and Geo. A. Klingel, one of the county's most prominent citizens, on laying eyes on the man, told His Efficiency that HE was the teller of the robbery tale!

Dinnerwetter! The trooper could not recall anything of the sort and after telling the four absolutely reliable people named above that they didn't know what they were talking about, that he hadn't drunk a cup of Circle Cafe coffee while talking of robbers and gold, that HIS records show HE was not down this way that evening, and that HE hadn't done this or that, HE left the Cafe in a huff, jumped on his motorcycle, and off HE went for Gettysburg.

Now what sort of report went into State headquarters, if any?

The ITEM has since learned that a state cop recently was said to be in such a condition that his motorcycle had to be stopt by a local garage man and the trooper, it is said, had to be helped on and off his machine.

The good name of the State Police undoubtedly needs upholding in this section, from these reports.

ROUND HILL BARN BURNED

Fire of unknown origin, which is said to have started in the fodder mow, destroyed the large bank barn, hog stable, wagon shed and other out-buildings on the farm of Elmer Moul, at Round Hill, Thursday afternoon. Nobody had been on the mow for three days and spontaneous combustion is ascribed as the cause of the blaze. Mr. Moul, on emerging from the house about 1:15 o'clock, observed smoke issuing from the barn and in a few seconds the flames burst forth. The man succeeded in saving all his live stock, but most of his machinery was burned, together with the rest of the contents. The barn had been built about 7 years ago. The loss is estimated at several thousand dollars, with about $1500 insurance. Mr. Moul will rebuild. Many neighbors responded and saved the house by hard work.

FRIENDS URGE CANDIDACY

At the urgent request of a host of friends of both parties, Dr. Eugene Elgin, of East Berlin, the present incumbent, will shortly announce his candidacy for the Republican nomination for the Assembly from Adams county. It is expected that Dr. Elgin will have no opposition at the primary, which will be held this year in May. Dr. Elgin's record at Harrisburg has met with favor by most of the voters, and it is generally conceded that he should be returned for another term for the good of this district.

OIL STOVE EXPLODED

Presence of mind on the part of M. J. Sterner, Hanover street, on Sunday evening, probably prevented a disastrous blaze. Mr. and Mrs. Sterner were seated in the living room of their home when the oil heater gave a sudden puff. Quickly grabbing the stove, Mr. Sterner gave it a pitch out of the window. The stove had barely left his hands when it exploded. A slight blaze in the carpet was hastily extinguished by Mr. Sterner. No cause for the stove's action could be given.

FOX CHASE AT HAMPTON

Four thousand and one fox hunters and hounds were wanted at Hampton on Thursday, Jan. 19th, when the largest fox ever caught on the sunny side of the Pigeon Hills will be turned loose at 1:30 P. M. A Pig Chase will also be held at 1 o'clock on the Hampton square. Music will be furnished by a good band. The committee in charge extends a cordial invitation to everybody to join or witness the event.

SEEKS TREASURE ON OCEAN BOTTOM

California Man Fits Out Expedition to Recover Cargo of Gold and Whisky.

Los Angeles, Cal.—One million dollars in gold and 364 barrels of sixty-year-old whisky have been located by a citizen of this city and he is now fitting out an expedition to recover the treasure. The fortunate man is F. B. Mansfield, a real estate dealer, who learned of the wealth awaiting him while on a vacation tour in northern California.

The gold and whisky formed the cargo of the ship Brother Jonathan, which sank off Crescent City on July 30, 1865. Official data obtained in Sank Off Crescent City.

Washington confirms the statement regarding the cargo and sinking of the vessel, which carried several hundred persons to their grave.

Mr. Mansfield is at Berkeley, Cal., fitting out an expedition to salvage the treasure. He has obtained the services of a diver with which he expects to reach the sunken vessel. The wreck is said to lie in 320 feet of water and to be readily accessible to divers.

Mr. Mansfield became interested in the sunken treasure while visiting in Crescent City and talking with a pioneer of the town. He was shown the rock that had sent the ship to its doom and with that as a starting point, he used a special instrument designed to detect the presence of precious metals. This instrument, he declares, accurately locates sunken gold and he is certain the salvage efforts will be richly rewarded.

TORRID LETTERS WIN DIVORCE

Husband Also Testifies That When He Was Sick Wife Refused to Take Care of Him.

Cincinnati, O.—A number of torrid love letters from Chicago men which Charles F. Mondary, 20, railroad clerk, 554 Laurel street, this city, introduced as evidence in domestic relations court here, and which he testified were written to his wife, Mary Mondary, twenty-seven, now in Chicago, secured a divorce for him.

One letter written by the wife to Mondary said: "I find there are lots of Chicago bachelors who are openly waiting for a nice little girl for a pet and see that she is well provided for. That is just how I am sailing along now. Let me know how you are getting along. As always, Mary." Mondary testified that his wife would not mend his clothes or cook his meals when they lived together in Chicago and when he was sick in 1917 she would not take care of him, but brought him home to his wealthy parents and left him.

Burning Pigeons Fall As Rockets Into River

St. Paul, Minn.—When an employee of a wholesale produce firm dived through a second-story window to escape flames which were consuming the building Thursday night, hundreds of pigeons followed him. As they merged from the broken window the black background of night made noticeable spots of flame on wings and tails of many of the birds. Their course was over the Mississippi river. Fanned by the motion of flying the flames spread until the birds were enveloped and many of them, like falling rockets, dropped into the stream.

Tarred and Feathered Stepson's Goods. Atlantic City, N. J.—Mrs. Winona Moore is held in $500 bail for applying tar and feathers to her stepson's furniture. According to the complaint, the "malicious mischief" was done after the woman had a quarrel with the boy's father in which the stepson opposed her.

AGAIN TAKES BANDIT TRAIL

Law Enforcer of Earlier Day Built Reputation Which Strikes Fear in Heart of Bad Men of the Range.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Capt. Frank Canton, terror of bandits, outlaws and thieves has "hit the trail" again after a few years of virtual retirement here. He is after cattle thieves exclusively now and is making it warm for men engaged in that business. The Osage hills called him a few weeks ago and he's now out among the rich Indians getting evidence to convict men of stealing cows.

"This work isn't like that of the old days," Captain Canton says. "I don't go to the hills and the steaks, the caves and the canyons and underbrush like I did as a young man. My duties are to assist the county attorney in prosecutions after our field men and sheriffs have rounded up the men charged with cattle stealing."

Was Head of National Guard.

Captain Canton is Oklahoma agent of the Texas-Southwestern Cattle Raisers' association, an organization that he represented for several years before Governor Haskell appointed him adjutant general of the Oklahoma National Guard.

Very seldom are cattle stolen in Oklahoma that belong to members of the cattle raisers' association, Captain Canton says. The association maintains inspectors at the principal shipping and selling points and cattle belonging to members bear the association brand. An inspector is under no obligation, indeed has no authority, to apprehend cattle that do not bear that brand or make inquiry of the supposed owner as to how he came in possession of the cattle.

Presence Having Wholesome Effect. The presence of Frank Canton in the cattle country, old and stooped as he is, is said to have a wholesome effect. He was as courageous a man thirty years ago as ever rode the plains, and his intuition, perception and judgment were not excelled by any other law enforcer of the West.

Wyoming, where he was sheriff, felt his uncanny power. Montana outlaws escaped far away from his hailwick. To Texas rangers he taught the arts of man-catching. In the Panhandle of Texas, in New Mexico, in Colorado and in northwestern Oklahoma his name gave law violators chills.

HOBOS AVENGE BENEFACTOR

Down-and-Outers Drag In Man for Stealing Stickpin From Social Worker.

New York.—The down-and-outers of the Bowery scoured lodging houses and poolrooms and then dragged before the police a man whom they accused of having snatched a $125 stickpin from Herman Muller, a social worker, in an east-side restaurant early today.

Muller was following his weekly custom of distributing free "feeds" to the economically unlucky, with the unfortunate ones telling him their troubles during the meal, when two of his guests set upon him and escaped with the pin.

A detective to whom Muller reported his loss climbed on a table and told the down-and-outers that it was a shame for their benefactor to be treated so shabbily and that if they did not get the culprit they would have him to reckon with.

Fumes From Still Kill Girl.

Detroit, Mich.—Fumes from a whisky still killed Grace Bartolotta, three years old. Little hope is held for the recovery of her two sisters and mother, who were also overcome.

PERPETUAL MOTION AGAIN?

Customer—That fountain pen you sold me wasn't any good.
Salesman—What was the matter with it?

Customer—The other day when writing with it, it stopped writing all of a sudden.

Salesman—Did you fill it?
Customer—No, it said self-filling on the box.

Daily Short Story.

Once there was a pretty girl. But she was poor. She couldn't afford to buy a drug-store complexion.

She had to cultivate a natural one. Whereat a nice drug clerk fell in love with her.

So they were married and she had free soda water the rest of her life.

News Item.

"This statement claims that there is a river of ink in Algeria. Two streams join, one being impregnated with iron, the other with gallic acid. The combination, you understand, forms ink." "I follow you. And I suppose a reed swamp near by grows fountain pens."

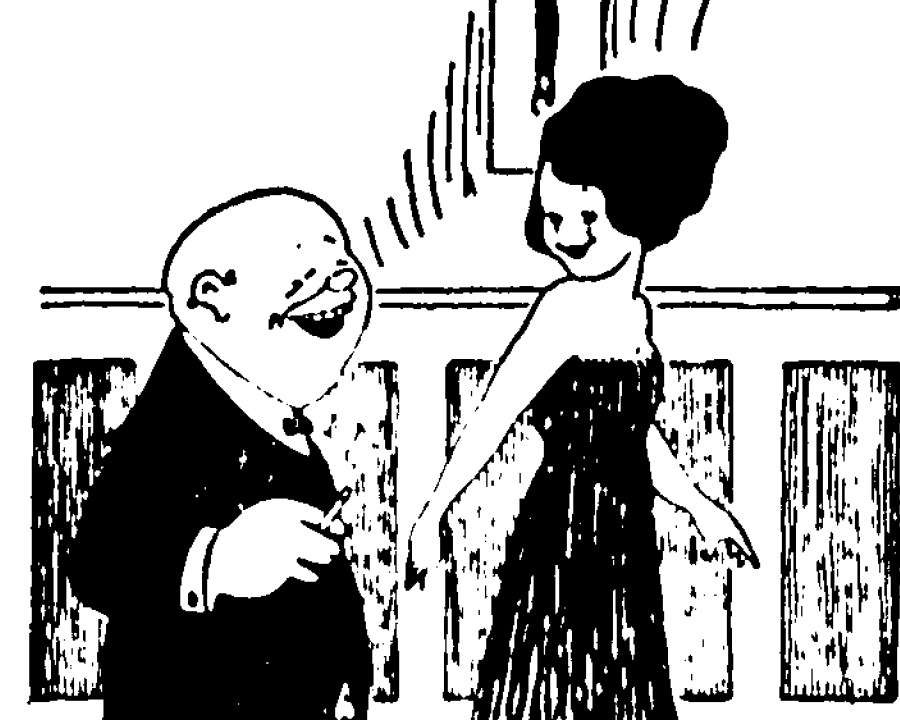

The Test.

"But how can I be sure of your love?" she asked. "You may be marrying me for my money."

"Well," he replied, thoughtfully, "you might give away your money before marriage."

"To whom?"

"Why, to me, of course."

HE GETS IT AGAIN

Cholly: I feel like a fool to-night
Maudie: So glad you've recovered.

Just Remember This.

No one can knock you on the sly. And do so with impunity; The only knocker who gets by is known as Opportunity.

Proof of His Greatness.

"The worst affront you can pay to an artist is to turn his picture upside down while trying to find out what it is intended to represent."

"That's true in the case of an old-fashioned artist, but if you turn the masterpiece of a cubist painter upside down his chest expands perceptibly."

What Everybody Thinks.

Canvasser—Better buy this work. It will show you how to earn more money than you are getting.
Jones—Humph! I do that now.

Obligatory.

Cholly—Is Peggy a careful dresser?
Willie—She has to be. She wears so few clothes that she doesn't dare to take any chances.

When Skirts Are Scant.

"Can your husband describe the way other women are dressed?"
"Certainly not."
"One of these unobservant men?"
"It isn't that he's unobservant. He's too polite."

Early Interest.

"You always seduce willing to allow your adversary to close the debate."
"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum. "As the debate closes the audience usually shows signs of fatigue and a willingness to walk out."

The Old Offender.

"Why don't you reform?" inquired the kind-hearted caller.
"Mister," replied Bill the Burg. "when it comes to reform I'm purty near a record-breaker. I have reformed fifteen or twenty times."

Does So.

"How do you like this patent-leather hair?"
"I wish I had gotten some when a boy," declared the baldhead. "It looks very durable."

After Marriage.

"Men are unreliable."
"Oh?"
"A man promises to go through fire and water for a girl."
"Well?"
"And then won't go through a series of afternoon teas."

Lonesome.

"There's no use, I must take up golf."
"Need the exercise?"
"No; I want to understand what my friends are talking about."

ALL SETTLED

"The stork has delivered a ten-pound boy at my house," said a caller at the office of the Chiggersville Clarion. "I want you to put a piece about it in your paper."

"All right," said the editor. "I'll write a snappy headline for the announcement and call him a future President of the United States."

"You needn't bother about that. His mother and her relations have already decided that he's going to be a motion picture star, because he has a dimple in his chin."

A Deadly Designation.

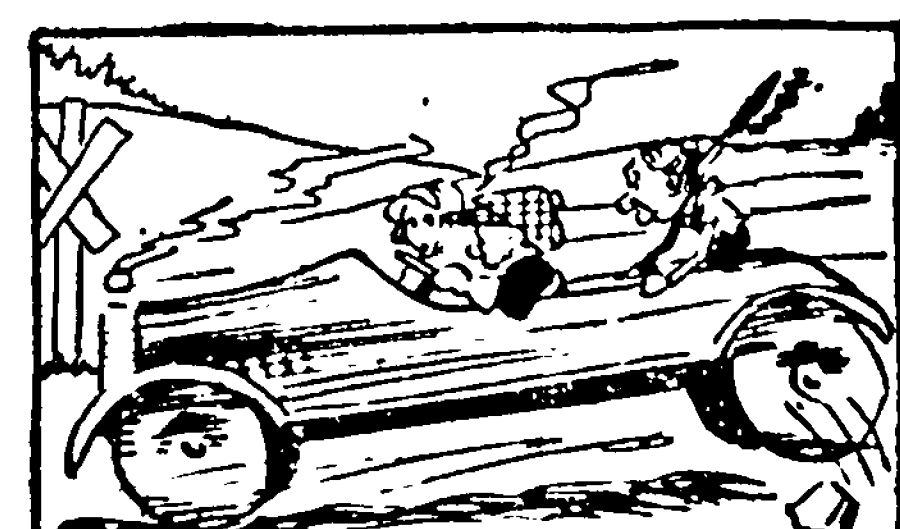

"Your political antagonist at least paid a glowing tribute to your intellectual attainments."

"It was about as mean and insidious a thing as he could have done," commented Senator Sorghum. "The surest way to defeat a man in my district is to give him the reputation of being a highbrow."

Money Misapplied.

"Did money ever help you to win an election?"

"On several occasions," replied Senator Sorghum. "It wasn't money that I spent myself, however. The opposition flourished so large a campaign fund that it made their candidate look like a tired business man instead of a statesman."

HE SHOULD WORRY

Wife: Not so fast George, you're frightening your poor old aunt to death in the back seat.

Hubby: Calm yourself dear, there's a handsome legacy coming to me when she's gone.

I'd Like to Be.

"I'd like to be a little fish," said youthful Jack McGrath. "For then I'd have no ears to wash. Nor hafter take a bath!"

Her Idea of It.

"My dear," said Mr. Plunger when he went home one evening, "I've something important to tell you—a receiver has been appointed to take charge of my affairs."

"How nice!" cooed Mrs. Plunger. "When will he hold his first reception?"

Language of the People.

"When you find the abbreviation 'Collop' after a word in a dictionary that means it is colloquial."

"Of course," said the practical politician. "And that part of the dictionary is used by successful campaigners more than any other."

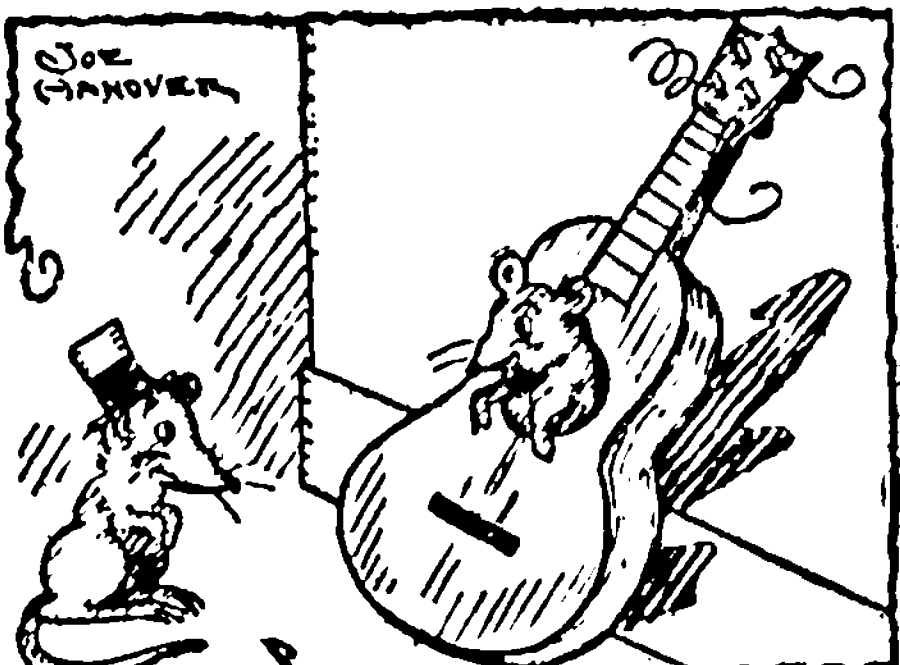

Optimism of Candidates.

"How's Sam Twobible getting along in his race for constable?"

"He's greatly encouraged."

"Yes?"

"Three citizens accepted cigars this morning and assured him of their support. Sam's predicting a groundswell."

MUSICAL

"You say your children are musical?"

"Sure, we are living in an ukulele now."

Nowhere, Is Right.

"Tis lovely to live in a flat. You never can mislay your hat; You wear it always on your crown—There's no place to lay it down."

Gentle, but Effective.

The Resort Manager—Thank you, sir. Here's your receipted bill. Everything satisfactory?

Away Out of Style.

"Does your wife complain when her clothes are out of style?"

"Not always," replied Mr. Meekton. "She went to a costume ball last winter and insisted, regardless of expense, in dressing like Queen Elizabeth."

Literally.

Dealer in second-hand garments (to assistant):—We can't mark this suit "Fashionable." It's too shabby.
Assistant:—No but you might mark it. "Very much worn."

OF FRENCH ORIGIN

Unbuckled Galoshes Can Be Traced to Historic Incident.

Battle of Steinkirk, in 1692, Laid the Foundation for the Present Freakish Fashion.

How many of the young ladies who parade down Michigan boulevard with unbuckled galoshes clanking about their ankles know where and how the freakish fashion originated? asks a writer in the Chicago Journal.

In July, 1692, the French forces under Marshal Luxembourg were camped at Steinkirk, in what is now Belgium; while six miles away lay the allied troops under William III. of England. The two armies were too evenly balanced for either to attack unless it could secure some special advantage; and the French commander was kept informed of every allied move by a spy who was chief secretary to one of the German princes in the allied ranks. This man's treason was discovered, a pistol was put to his head, and he was compelled to write and forward a letter which was a trap. It told that the allies meant to send out a foraging party the next morning, and to guard this, would occupy the ground between the two armies with strong detachments of infantry.

With this letter preparing the way for a surprise, a general assault was planned, and came near being successful. The allied troops, a British brigade leading, almost reached the French lines before the trick was discovered. The French advance guard was smashed and routed. The Swiss mercenaries in the French service were beaten. But then the household troops of Louis XIV. entered the fray, led by young nobles and princes of the blood, and after a terrific struggle the English and their allies were driven back.

At that time, the French noble in military service was as much a dandy as a soldier. He wore lace collar and cuffs, as costly as his parents could afford, and arranged with the most foppish care. But with the English column smashing its way into camp, there was no time for such fine work; the heroic dandies charged with collars loose and cravats untied; and Paris seized on this disarray and made a fashion of it to commemorate the victory. The name of "Steinkirk" was given to adornments worn askew or left flapping.

At irregular intervals since then, the Steinkirk fashion comes back. Gloves ties, blouses, all have been worn with elaborate carelessness which probably is meant to signify that the wearer has plenty more, and would not mind losing this one. But never, surely, did the fad take an uglier form than in its present aspect of unbuckled galoshes.

Shaking Them Up.

"Well, I golly, boys, there is more new window glass in Madison just now than ever before," said Major H. O. Woolford, of that city, to a number of friends at the statehouse. "You see when the Madison battery with its complete equipment of large guns was getting ready to go to Indianapolis to participate in the Poch celebration we decided to fire a 'sample salute,' as some of the local citizens had asked to 'see just how the guns acted.' When those big guns tore loose, with the lightest charge possible, there was a rattling and crash of window glass in some of the nearby buildings. From that day to this claims have been pouring in for broken window glass, and just yesterday a woman a half-mile away from where the guns were fired sent in a claim for glass. All the old pillows and tufts of rugs have disappeared from broken windows and the best old town along the Ohio river is looking very nifty now."—Indianapolis News.

A Quick Retort.

A certain city superintendent in the state of Indiana is not kindly disposed toward the manual training department of his school and it is his habit to relegate all the poor teachers to this department of "has-been" teachers, relates the Indianapolis News. The other day a young fellow who had lost his leg overseas and who had finished his college course after he came home, went to the superintendent for a job.

"Well," the superintendent tried to act as if he were conferring a favor, "I guess I might put you in the manual training department."

The young man had heard of the city's manual training department and he retorted with a bit of irony: "Yep, I guess there's where I belong—a peg-legged fellow in with the wooden heads."

Chinese Clock for Mexico City.

The Chinese colony in Mexico City has presented that municipality with a Chinese clock, which was officially accepted by President Obregon and a company of diplomats recently, and is now telling time in the Oriental way. The mayor wound the clock, and champagne was served. During the ceremony the Mexican hymn and the Chinese national anthem were played.

Hot Water at 20 Cents a Quart.

European hotels do not dispense hot water as freely as the American hostilities. In some of them it is practically impossible to have a room with bath. In others it is possible to secure hot water only by feeding a gas slot machine with coins, while the gas heats the water. One traveler figures that it averages 20 cents worth of gas to heat each quart of water.

HEALTHFUL VIGOR IN STRONG BLOOD

Rich, Red Blood Built Up by Pepto-Mangan—Liquid or Tablet.

Blood is strong and full of life-giving vigor when there are plenty of red cells in it. Anemic people have little strength because there are not enough red cells in the blood. It is thin and watery. Weak blood makes faces pale, pulls down the strength and leaves the body tired, weak, and sickly.

A course in Gude's Pepto-Mangan restores weak blood to its normal strength. Taken regularly for a while it adds red cells to the blood. Then with good blood, the strength and vigor of health return. There is pleasure in living, with good blood running through the veins. Gude's Pepto-Mangan is put up in liquid and in tablet form. They are the same medicinally. Physicians have prescribed Gude's Pepto-Mangan for years. The name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on the package. Advertisement.

TIGHT WINDOWS SAVE COAL BILL

To Keep Home Comfortable It Will Be Found That Stopping Up Cracks Helps Greatly.

LEAKAGE BIG ON WINDY DAYS

Ordinary Felt Weather Stripping Helps to Keep Out Cold Air and Reduces Fuel Cost—Also Keeps Out Dirt and Smoke.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Stopping up cracks around doors and windows is an important factor in cutting down the coal bill and keeping the rooms comfortable, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1104, Operating a Home Heating Plant, published by the United States Department of Agriculture. More fuel invariably is consumed in a house with loosely fitted windows than in one where the cracks are protected. In the windward rooms of some houses on particularly cold windy days the leakage about window and door framing will be so great that the rooms can not be heated to a comfortable temperature, even by forcing the furnace to its limit.

Small Cracks Let in Much Air.

Tight-fitting windows, says the bulletin, are essential if leakage losses are to be kept down. Ordinary felt weather stripping helps to reduce this loss. Metal weather stripping is still better and aids materially in saving fuel. Tests have demonstrated that it is possible, by the use of metal weather stripping, to reduce by 88 per cent the leakage through a 1-32-inch crack when the wind is blowing 15 miles an hour and by 83 per cent with a 30-mile wind.

The condition of the windows in a building, whether tight, loose or just loose enough to rattle plays a very important part not only in the comfort derived from a heating plant but more noticeably in the annual cost of operation. Suitable metal weather stripping frequently reduces by 15 to 20 per cent the radiation required.

The prevention of window leakage means a saving of heat and a lessening of dirt blown into the house. In a certain apartment house, says the bulletin, situated near a railroad station in a large city, during the first season of its occupancy the heating system supplied sufficient heat with a reasonable economy of fuel, but smoke and dust were a nuisance. Metal weather stripping was applied before the next heating season, and as a result the temperature of the rooms was too high.

Big Fuel Saving.

A fuel saving of 15 to 25 per cent appears possible by equipping windows and doors with metal stripping. If, therefore, metal stripping is put in when a house is built, it is possible to reduce the size and cost of the heating plant in proportion to the reduction in radiation surface made possible. The cost of metal weather stripping may frequently be offset by the reduction in the cost of the heating plant.

Copies of the bulletin may be had upon request of the department at Washington, D. C.

Midday Meal Presents Big Problem in Some Cases.

Offers Favorable Opportunity to Inculcate Habits of Cleanliness and to Teach Children Sanitation and Simple Cookery.

While the carrying of lunches is by far the most common practice, taking country and town together, there are few cases in which it is not desirable for the school to share with the home the responsibility for the noonday meal. In some places the task for the school may be hardly more than that of providing clean and safe places for lunch baskets, where the food will not be likely to become dirty or spoiled. In others it may be practicable to provide by one means or another a hot dish with which to supplement foods brought from home. In still others, particularly where large attendance and many teachers and other workers make subdivision of labor a comparatively easy matter, it may be possible for the school to establish and maintain lunch rooms.

It is in the small country school with only one teacher that the midday meal presents the most difficult problems. The common custom is still for the pupils to bring their lunches, but there is a growing tendency to try the experiment of preparing part of the meal at school, and of allowing time for serving it carefully. If rightly handled, the meal, even under the unusual difficulties presented in the rural school, may offer the most favorable of all opportunities to inculcate habits of cleanliness and to teach sanitation and simple cookery. The situation, however, requires a tenacity of ingenuity and of enthusiasm for her work.

The simplest of equipments includes a large kettle suitable to be used on the stove that heats the schoolhouse, measuring cup and spoons, paring knife, mixing spoon, dish pans, and towels. It will usually be possible for the boys to make a set of shelves for the dishes, using box lumber if no other is available, and for the girls to make curtains or other coverings for protecting the dishes from dust. The pupils will, as a rule, be found willing to bring plates, cups, bowls and spoons to keep down expenses. A fireless cooker is convenient for meat stews, meat and bean soups, cereal mushes, and many other dishes that require long cooking.

The recipes for the dishes cooked for lunch may be given to the older girls in school, discussed in class, and tried at home. The special dish for the day, which in winter is usually hot and in summer cold, can be prepared and served at noon by the girls in turn, working in groups, suggest home economics specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. It will often be necessary to serve the food to the children at their seats, a practice which is not especially objectionable if the schoolhouse is clean and well ventilated, the desks carefully cleaned before meals, and the building thoroughly screened to keep out flies.

GIVE BRUSHES PROPER CARE

One Used for Oil Paint or Stain Should Be Thoroughly Washed in Turpentine.

Brushes for applying stain, varnish, paint, and oil are manufactured in various sizes and qualities. In general, a wide brush of good quality will be found most convenient and economical, and if properly cared for can be used over and over again. It is pointed out in Farmers' Bulletin 1219, Floors and Floor Coverings, recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

A varnish brush may be kept in the varnish in which it is used, or, in case of shellac varnish, in alcohol; but brushes used in oil paint and oil stain, unless they are to be used again within a few days, should be thoroughly washed in turpentine or kerosene, rinsed in gasoline or benzine, washed again in warm soapsuds, thoroughly shaken, and hung up to dry with the bristles down. Paint brushes that are to be used again the next day may simply be wrapped in several thicknesses of paper, or they may be kept for several days with the bristles submerged in turpentine or kerosene. If kerosene is used, the brush must be shaken and rinsed in turpentine before it is put into paint again. Brushes used in water stain may be washed and rinsed in clear water.

All Around the House

Never flavor a boiled custard until cold.

If soap is allowed time to harden it will last twice as long.

A little curry powder added to soups or stews makes the dish quite different in taste.

An orange, apple or lemon put in the box with sweet cakes gives a delicious flavor.

"SMALL HOMES MAKE CITY"

Testimony of Expert Who is Warm Advocate of Building Zone Idea During Town's Youth.

"Make a city of the owners of small homes and you will have a well-run city."

This was the verdict of Edward W. Basset, counsel of the zoning committee of the New York board of estimate and father of the zoning law, after an exhaustive review of city development under the building zone system.

"Before the days of zoning," said he, "the head of a family would be forced two or three times to sell his private home because he was pushed out by advancing stores or apartment houses. Then he would usually move to New Jersey, Long Island or Westchester, and New York would lose a good citizen. A home owner takes a lively interest in local improvement and neighborhood welfare. Until New York adopted the zoning plan, there was no encouragement for small home owners inside of the city limits. Now the owner of a small home is better protected in many parts than if he goes out into suburban villages."

"Small detached homes are springing up rapidly in all of the outlying boroughs, especially in Brooklyn and Queens. The home owner sees that in residence location he is protected against invasion of stores, small factories and garages. In the D and B districts he is safe from large tenements and apartments. He is willing to put his earnings in the equity of a small home and pay off his second mortgage by installments because the zoning plan has lessened the dangers that would wipe out his home equity."

ALWAYS TIME WELL SPENT

"Cleanup Week," as an institution, Should Be a Feature of Every Town and Village.

Cleanliness, as we have been reliably informed, is next to godliness.

And community cleanliness is just as important as individual cleanliness. If we are to have a pleasant, healthful and decent city to live in.

Milwaukee has always occupied an enviable position among the cities of the country for its civic tidiness, and the annual institution known as "cleanup week" has helped materially to this happy state of affairs.

We have been having a salutary "cleanup" in respect of the moral surroundings of the city. A good deal of rubbish has been dragged out and done away with and stray corners are still being explored and tidied up with excellent results in so far as the moral atmosphere is concerned.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

FOILING SMALL BOY

Because small boys do not seem to be able to refrain from throwing stones, the Los Angeles park commission has protected the glass covered rules and regulations by heavy wire screens.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Practical City Planning.

There is no mystery whatever about city planning. It is only the application of common sense business methods to the development of a city. Too frequently city planning has been understood in this country as relating merely to the esthetic side of city improvement and city development. We must get rid of that notion.

The element of beauty, of course, must never be overlooked, but it would be more to the point to fix as the goal of a city plan the idea of making the city a more practical city. Real city planning must inevitably deal more with the practical than with the beautiful. It must aim for better and more attractive living conditions.—Charles F. Coffin.

Billions Invested in Homes.

There are approximately 6,000,000 families in the United States living in their own homes. This represents an aggregate investment of $30,000,000,000, since builders and contractors declare that the average American home is valued at $5,000. At 5 per cent the American home owners are therefore paying out about $1,500,000,000 for the privilege of enjoying life under roofs that belong to them. The 5 per cent will easily take care of repairs, taxes and interest on the investment.

"Say Less and Do More."

If we could only make our hands move as actively as our tongue, if we could say less and do more for each other's good, not alone would every home be happier, but communities would be greatly enriched thereby.—John Wapmanaker.

DIDN'T HAVE TO HAVE PROOFS

Colored Lady Had Confidence in the Ability of Witnesses to Sustain Her Charge.

A southern magistrate had before him as a complaining witness a colored woman who had caused to be held a man on the charge that he had attacked her with a pair of scissors. "He mighty neah gouged my eye out, Jedge," she said. "He poked me 'n do face with them scissors, Jedge, not once, but fo' or five times. He jest cut up my face like it was a yard of ribbon. There ain't no mo' dangerous man alive, Jedge."

The magistrate looked her over. She had a wide, smooth, yellow face that did not have a mark on it. He told her to repeat her story, and she went through it again, telling how the man had slashed her face with that pair of scissors.

"But," said the judge, "there isn't a mark on your face."

"Marks!" she exclaimed, indignant. "Marks! What I care fo' marks, I leame ask yo' that? I got witnesses, I tell you!"

MOTHER! MOVE

CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Hurry, mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Colorful.

"Your narrative is too highly colored," remarked the editor, returning the bulky manuscript.

"In what way?" inquired the disappointed author.

"Why," replied the editor "in the very first chapter you make the old man turn purple with rage, the villain turn green with envy, the hero turn white with anger, the heroine turn red with blushes and the coachman turn blue with cold."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Surely the Proper Thing.

They were thrown into each other's society in a country house, without common interests or the least attraction for each other.

Finally, after casting about for a fertile subject of conversation, only to fail in every attempt, he said, desperately: "Will you marry me?"

She considered long and deeply. "I think I'll say yes," she replied at last. "It will give us so much more to talk about while we're here."

Pulled Through.

"Your son has settled down to hard work."

"Yes," said the proud father. "I'm glad now that I had confidence in the boy. When he took to playing the ukulele and 'stepped on the gas' when he wasn't darning, I got a bit discouraged, but I kept telling mother not to worry, that he'd make a man out of himself yet."

Foul Play.

The Scottish bowling team is accompanied by a band of pipers which plays prior to every important match. The general opinion is that this gives a very unfair advantage to the Northerners, who are used to it.—The Passing Show (London).

The Finish of Bluebeard.

Bluebeard—Well, I'm a widower again. How about it? I'm crazy about you.

His Latest Love—I think a lot of you, Bluebeard, but you'll have to shave first. I'm awfully ticklish.

Anyhow, the silent grouch isn't boring anybody.

COMPANION KNEW "OLD BIRD"

Inquiry Brought Instant Response Considerably Embarrassing to Youthful New Teacher.

I was just out of college and had gone for the first time to teach in a high school. I had not, yet lost my college girl propensity for seeking to extract fun out of everything, whether serious or comic. A formal meeting of the faculty of the city was in progress, with the prominent school men—superintendent, commissioners, and principals—seated on the platform. Among them was a severe-looking old pedagogue with a long white, flowing beard.

Next to me sat a sedate woman whom I rashly had taken to be a new member of the faculty.

I turned to her with what I supposed to be an infectious burst of confidence and giggled: "Who's the old bird with the whiskers?"

The woman turned her face directly toward me, looked me up and down, with an expression that congealed the blood within me, and said, curtly: "My father!"—Chicago Tribune.

FLATLY REFUSED TO "SLIDE"

Elderly Lady's Dignity Was Hurt by Request Made to Her by Fellow Passenger.

She was one of those fussy little old women, all primed and with her hair in a curl.

When she got aboard the street car several men—yes, there are some who still respect gray hairs on a street car—got up and offered a seat. She accepted one gentlemanly proffer, but didn't keep the seat long. When she had finally found repose a woman next to her said:

"Would you mind sliding over just a bit, please? Then another lady can have a seat."

Her gray-haired majesty rose to lofty heights.

"Slide? Slide?" she sputtered. "I will not slide. I will arise and take my body elsewhere."

And, sulking her actions to her words, she arose and took her body up to the front of the car, where her dignity would not be assailed by a request to slide.—Indianapolis News.

Only on "Appro."

In one of our ancient towns which has recently been the scene of a pageant, a party of Americans was being conducted over the admirable abbey.

The age of this part and that were pointed out by a learned attendant, and, at length: "That arch," said he, "may possibly go back to Alfreda and Edward."

"Don't you like it?" said a guest promptly.

The attendant explained that he did not understand.

"Why are you sending it back, anyway? Doesn't it suit you?"

Blessings of Obscurity.

"Doesn't it make you discontented to read about movie stars getting $2,000 a week?"

"Sometimes it does," said the citizen whose income is $3,000 a year, "but, on the other hand, it is a lot of satisfaction for me to know that I don't have to tell an inquisitive public what I eat, what I wear, how I amuse myself in my leisure moments and the exact state of my affections from day to day."

Conserving Her Energy.

Mr. Constant Knagg—You don't mean to tell me your wife allows you to interrupt her lectures?

Mr. Henry N. Peck—Along toward the finish she gives me a slight chance while she gathers her breath for the last word.

"I've heard that the new talking machines have an automatic self-stopping device."

"Huh! Then my wife must be an old model."

Revelation.

"Jack says that I'm one girl in a hundred." "Yes, dear—one in a hundred he's made love to."

Nothing is more detestable than other people's prejudices.

Many a man earns his bread by the sweat of his hired man's brow.

MC SHERRYSTOWN HOMES ENTERED BY THIEVES

The home of Miss Mary Lawrence, manager of the branch store of N. B. Carver & Sons at McSherrystown, was robbed of over $40 Thursday evening while she and Miss Tillie Lawrence were at church. The house of Clement Sneeringer, three doors below, was also entered that same evening evidently with the intention to rob. Mr. Sneeringer, who had been indisposed and had not attended church, was in the house at the time and evidently scared off the intruders. Nothing was taken from this home. It is not known how the thief or thieves gained entrance to the Lawrence home. Miss Lawrence found the back door had been unbolted from the inside, the robbers evidently having gone out that way. Nothing else was disturbed. Mr. Sneeringer, aroused by a noise downstairs, went down but found nothing unusual except that the cellar door was ajar. Next morning the outside cellar door was also found open.

THAT MORNING LAMENESS

If you are lame every morning, and suffer urinary ills, there must be a cause. Often it's weak kidneys. To strengthen the weakened kidneys and avert more serious troubles, use Doan's Kidney Pills. You can rely on this man's testimony.

John J. Tawney, 234 Baltimore St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I suffered off and on with rheumatic pains and kidney ailments. My back ached constantly and often in the morning I was so lame and stiff I could hardly get out of bed. My kidneys acted irregularly, too. Someone advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I got some. I was surprised at the quick relief I received. I am not bothered by rheumatic pains now and I am much better all around."

OVER TWO YEARS LATER, Mr. Tawney said: "I still use Doan's Kidney Pills, in fact, I always keep them in the house. I know if I take a few as soon as I have any symptoms of kidney trouble, I will be saved a great deal of suffering."

Miller; secretary, Charles Hafer; health officer, Jacob M. Nickey. The other members of the board are Emory S. Alwine, Allen March and H. E. Shellenberger.

S. E. Swope, Gettysburg, has been notified of his appointment as an assistant State fire marshal of this district.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad but loving remembrance of my dear wife, Mary Ann Null, who departed this life two years ago, Nov. 25, 1919.

What grief and pain she suffered here,

None of us will ever know.

But Jesus took her home with him,

Where no tears will ever flow.

Into sweetest rest she has entered,

No more to grieve and weep.

She is smiling upon me from heaven,

My dear wife has fallen asleep.

When you ask me, do I miss her?

Yes it fills my heart with pain.

But her spirit softly whispers,

In heaven we shall meet again.

Time may pass and years may fly,

And every hope will fade and die.

And every peaceful dream may set,

But my dear wife I cannot forget.

By her husband,

GEO. W. NULL.

REPEATER FACES COURT

Charged with the misdemeanor of fraudulently voting twice in same district on the same day at the general election held in Adams county on November 8, Guy F. Blocher, Littlestown, was arrested Friday by private Leggoe of the Gettysburg station of the State police on a process issued by the Court at its session on November 14. A preliminary hearing was held Friday before Justice Blocher, Littlestown, when Guy Blocher was released under $500 bail furnished by his father, W. F. Blocher, for his appearance at Court, which begins Monday, January 23. Blocher is said to have entered the polling place in Littlestown about 9 o'clock and voted. At 11 o'clock, Blocher reappeared at the polls and demanded another ballot. When it was refused, Blocher is said to have raised a disturbance and compelled the judges of the election to give him another ballot. Those who were present in the voting place when Blocher put in his second appearance declare that he was under the influence of liquor, according to the police. On Monday, November 14, the day set by the Court to hear the returns of the constables of the various townships, Constable Goucher, Littlestown, reported this occurrence to Judge McPherson. The Judge immediately ordered the district attorney to issue a process asking for the arrest of Blocher and the district attorney swore out a warrant. The case is the first of its kind in the history of the county, and the charge which is a very serious one carries with it a heavy fine and jail sentence in case of conviction.

The body of Pvt. Jacob Markline, of Co. C, 11th Infantry, who died in France on October 31, 1918, from wounds received in action, was brought to the home of the boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Markline, Sr., about three miles from Hanover along the Abbottstown 'pike. The funeral will be held on Sunday, January 15, at 1 p. m. from the house. Interment at Bair's meeting house. Besides the parents, a number of brothers and sisters survive, including Mrs. Daniel Laughman, Bittingers; Mrs. Alfred Albright, at home, and Mrs. Clarence Warner, Hanover.

All the factories operated in this section of the state by the San Telmo Cigar company are being closed and the stock and fixtures moved to Detroit, Michigan. One factory was located in Hanover.

FORGERY CHARGED

Already under bail for a hearing for an alleged offense he committed in Shrewsbury, several days ago, N. C.
McSherry, 25 years old, a member of a prominent family in Gettysburg,
was arrested in Hanover by Chief
Crabbs, Saturday, on forgery charge,
preferred before Justice Sell, by Paul
Britcher, McSherry, it is claimed,
presented a check of $500, made payable to William McSherry, a step-brother and a prominent attorney-at-law, of Gettysburg, to four banking institutions in Hanover. The check, dated January 7, 1922, was one for the People's Bank of Hanover but the name of the bank was changed to the Gettysburg National bank. When the banks refused to cash the check, Mc-Sherry went to the Hanover Savings bank, where he was told that the check would be honored if he could get someone to identify him. McSherry, it is claimed, returned to the bank
with the signature of Paul Britcher
on it. The bank communicated with Britcher, who claimed that his name was a forgery. McSherry was then placed under arrest. He was committed to jail, but later taken to Gettysburg, where he secured bail. He had borrowed Britcher's fountain pen to endorse his name on the check. Mc-Sherry, it is said, went to Hanover,
and registered at the Albaugh hotel,
and gave his residence as Silver City,
New Mexico. An investigation by Chief Crabbs revealed that McSherry is the same I. N. McSherry who was arrested in Shrewsbury several days ago. It is said that he offered a check to a proprietor of a garage
there, in payment for gasoline and then attempted to run away. He was out on bail Saturday morning when he was arrested. It is believed he is of unsound mind and will probably be examined before being given a hearing.

The young man, who has been making his home with his step-brother, in Gettysburg, has been held in good repute in his home town. He is unmarried, and is said to have served overseas during the World War. He was dismissed lately from the Gettysburg National bank, where he was employed as a clerk. He claimed he was on his way to New Mexico. He maintained a calm stolidity during the examination and kept smoking a cigarette all the while.

URNS OUT BAD EGG

Should R. P. Farrington, of Philadelphia and Washington, return to Gettysburg, he will have to face a charge preferred against him for passing a worthless check for $10 on
C. Ross Shuman, and for purchasing an overcoat from O. H. Lestz to the value of $22.50 and having it charged to the Gettysburg chapter of the Red Cross. Farrington came to Gettysburg last July as a traveling salesman and registered at the Hoffman
Hotel. On July 18 he attempted to commit suicide by drinking tincture of iodine. His groans were heard by
Mrs. Howard Mittinger at the time and his room was broken into, and he was rushed to the Warner Hospital, where the iodine was removed from his stomach. The reason he assigned at the time for attempting suicide were his inability to get employment, lack of funds and troubles with his family.
The Gettysburg chapter of the Red Cross befriended Farrington after his discharge from the hospital and procured him a job in the Gettysburg
Panel factory, where he worked until Saturday. It is understood, however, that he spent most of the money he made and usually was without funds.
Saturday evening he left.

Worth Considering.—The question is not so much how you contract a cold, but how to get rid of it with the least loss of time and inconvenience.
If you will consider the experience
of others under similar circumstances,
who have been most successful in checking their colds, in their beginning, you will secure a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without delay, and use it faithfully. There are many families who use this preparation successfully for years and hold it in high esteem. It is excellent.

The Boys Club of St. Mary's, Mc-

LAPHAM ARRESTED AGAIN

Percy and Harry McMaster, of East Berlin, appeared against J. Costella Lapham, also of East Berlin, at a trial Monday morning in the county jail charging him with "wantonly pointing fire arms" at them, Dec. 15. Lapham is under $1,500 bail to wait a hearing at court for carrying concealed deadly weapons and for a murderous assault upon Orville Zeigler in the butcher shop of Charles Wolfe, East Berlin. Lapham fired one shot at Zeigler after some heated words in the store, it is said. The shot went wild and Zeigler fled. Lapham was arrested later in the day and taken to Gettysburg. It is alleged that he was under the influence of liquor at the time. Both Percy and Harry McMasters claim that Lapham, before his assault on Zeigler, pointed his revolver at them and threatened to do them bodily injury. On December 22, they also swore out a warrant for the arrest of Lapham. After hearing the testimony, Mr. Hill placed another $500 bail on Lapham and recommitted him to jail, to await a trial.

In the sheriff's office at the jail Monday morning, Albert Vaughn, of Highland township, plead guilty of stealing a quantity of silver and bed-clothing from the cottage of Rev. J. B. Baker, along Marsh creek, during the fall. The stolen goods consisted of 19 pieces of silver, 7 pillows and cases and a cot. After hearing the charge, Vaughn entered a plea of guilty and was committed to jail where he had been since his arrest on December 21.

At a reorganization meeting of the Gettysburg Mutual Fire Insurance company, Monday morning, officers of the past year were re-elected to serve during 1922. The officers are: S. Miley Miller, president; Howard G. Blocher, Littlestown, vice president; W. E. Kapp, Biglerville, secretary; S. E. Gochendur, Bendersville, treasurer, and John D. Keith, Esq., attorney. The report of the auditors of the company, S. B. Gochendur, Bendersville and G. A. Klingel, New Oxford, for the past year, showed total resources of $25,713.47 and no liabilities. During the year 1921, the company has paid $1174.34 in fire losses.

"The lay members of the church must do more work in the churches and Sunday schools and not throw the whole burden upon the minister," was the admonition of the Hon. A. R. Brodbeck, Hanover, former Congressman, in an address to a father and son social held Thursday evening in the P. O. S. of A. Hall in Cashtown. Over 75 fathers and their sons attended the social.

Ten shares of stock of The First National Bank of York Springs were sold at the sale of Mrs. Minerva Dear-dorff to the following persons at the following prices: H. B. Pearson, 4 shares at $227; Dr. E. W. Cashman, 3 shares at $220 and 1 share at $216.50; the remaining 2 shares being bought by W. M. Weldner for $215 each.

George Wharton Pepper, Philadelphia lawyer, was appointed United States senator by Governor Sproul Monday to succeed the late Boies Penrose. Under the law the appointment stands until a successor is selected at the November election to fill the unexpired Penrose term ending in 1927.

The question, "Can A Woman Always Save A Man?" is answered in the novel, "The Son of the Vine", by Fr. Will W. Whalen, of Buchanan Valley. The author was asked where he got the idea for the story, and he admitted he ran across the originals not far from Adams County.

The newly chartered Gettysburg bus company will run an extra bus to and from Harrisburg when special attractions are to be seen at the theatres of the capital city. Another daily bus will be added in order to properly accommodate the public.

Mrs. Wm. S. Hendricks, of York Springs, fell on the ice on Saturday a week, injuring her ankle to an extent that led to her being taken to Harrisburg where an X-ray examination showed that a small bone had been fractured.

"Spiky" Klunk, McSherrystown, has issued a challenge to Chas. H. Harman, of Philadelphia, grand pool champion of Pennsylvania, for a game or series of games.

Byron W. King, of the School of Oratory, Pittsburgh, will deliver one of his famous lectures in the Abbottstown Lutheran church, Saturday evening, January 28.

Two mules and one horse recently died for Charles U. Kennedy, of Huntington township, their deaths being caused, it is thought, by mouldy corn fodder.

A machine driven by Guy Stover, of Littlestown, rammed the rear end of the buggy of William Bish, Union Mills, and damaged it considerably.

The engagement of Charles B. Kuhns, of Conneville, to Miss Cora E. Trimmer, Gettysburg, was announced recently.

John W. Grim, Abbottstown, moved his saw mill into the Harry Parr timber tract, near Hanover, last week.

W. L. McKinney has been appointed auditor for Hanover borough, vice Harry J. Stambaugh, resigned.

Of the 3,600,000 rabbits killed in Pennsylvania during the last season, 23,000 were bagged in Adams.

Lester Baum, Bermudian, accepted a position with Kapp and Seibert, of Dillsburg, as a truck driver.

Union services will be held in the churches of Hanover all this week.

FARM BUREAU MEETING

The morning session of the all-day convention of the Adams County Farm Bureau, held in Gettysburg, Thursday, ended with the election of officers for the ensuing year; the address of the retiring president, J. L. Butt, Esq., and the report of the farm agent, Paul Hoffman. Almost 100 members of the farm bureau were present. C. J. Tyson, of Flora Dale, was elected president for the coming year; G. W. Koser, of Biglerville, was chosen vice president; Harry F. Stambaugh, Pine Run, treasurer, and J. C. Bream, near Gettysburg, succeeds himself as secretary. That the success and prosperity of the town is closely interwoven with the success of all agriculture was the keynote of the address of Secretary of Agriculture Rasmussen, who addressed the members of the Gettysburg Chamber of Commerce and the Adams County Farm Bureau at noon at Hoffman Hotel. At the afternoon meeting, which followed the luncheon, W. B. Connell, an authority on livestock, and H. D. Monroe, poultry specialist, both from State College, were speakers. Many women attended the meetings and the luncheon.

Urging better grading of farm products in Adams county, State Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Rasmussen, speaking at the afternoon session of the Farm Bureau meeting in its annual conference, informed the members of that organization that this lack of grading was the reason the products of Pennsylvania farmers do not command the prices secured by farmers in other states.

The Hon. Rush Gillan, of Chambersburg, presided as president judge in the place of Hon. D. P. McPherson in the Adams county court session Friday morning when the case of Estella N. McDannel, of Franklin township, against J. Cameron Thomas, of the same township, was being presented. The case arose out of the sale of some land by Estella N. McDannel to Mr. Thomas who refused to pay the stipulated sum of $3,905 because he alleges that Miss McDannel does not have a clear title to the real estate. The land was willed to her by her father, Charles C. McDannel, who died in January, 1913. Judge Gillan after hearing the evidence withheld his opinion and will present it at a future session of the court. Judge McPherson was unable to preside in the case by being personally interested in the transfer of the property.

York county led the state last year in the amount of butter produced and the amount received for the product. The production was 1,625,666 pounds sold at an average price of 42 cents, the total value being $682,779.75. Lancaster county was a close second. Adams county report was 515,369 lbs. at 35 cents and total of $180,373.15. During the year there were 36,011,500 pounds of butter made on Pennsylvania farms and this was sold for an average of 44 cents per pound, or a total value of $15,831,458.46. In only two other counties was the price less than in Adams.

The personnel of the Sixth District of the State Highway Department, which includes the counties of Adams, York and Franklin, will remain unchanged. T. C. Frame will be retained as assistant engineer. The district office will remain at Gettysburg, and the office force is to be maintained. By eliminating several districts the Highway Department has reduced the number from 18 to 15.

Charles Morris Young, the prominent Philadelphia artist, who spent many years in Gettysburg painting pictures and interpreting the country side about his home near Round Top, has been engaged recently in landscape painting in and around Philadelphia and has had a successful exhibition of his paintings at the Radnor Hunt Club, near Bryn Mawr.

According to the record, 204 divorce suits were started in the York county courts during the past year. Clerk Smith issued 1,216 licenses to wed, 313 less than issued in 1920. Upwards of 500 non-support or desertion cases appeared in court during the past year.

John Thomas, teacher of the Center Mills school, was presented with a sweater, pair of fine gloves and silk handkerchief, showing the appreciation of patrons and pupils of the school for his work on the Christmas exercises given by the school.

By the Legislative apportionment based on the basis of the latest national census, Hanover has been transferred to the second from the fourth district, York county, which is discontinued. York city comprises the first district.

The First National Bank of Fairfield has declared a semi-annual dividend of five per cent. The stock of this institution sold recently at $200 a share, par value $100.

The Pennsylvania Department of the American Legion will conduct a state wide drive for new members starting January 16th and ending March 1st.

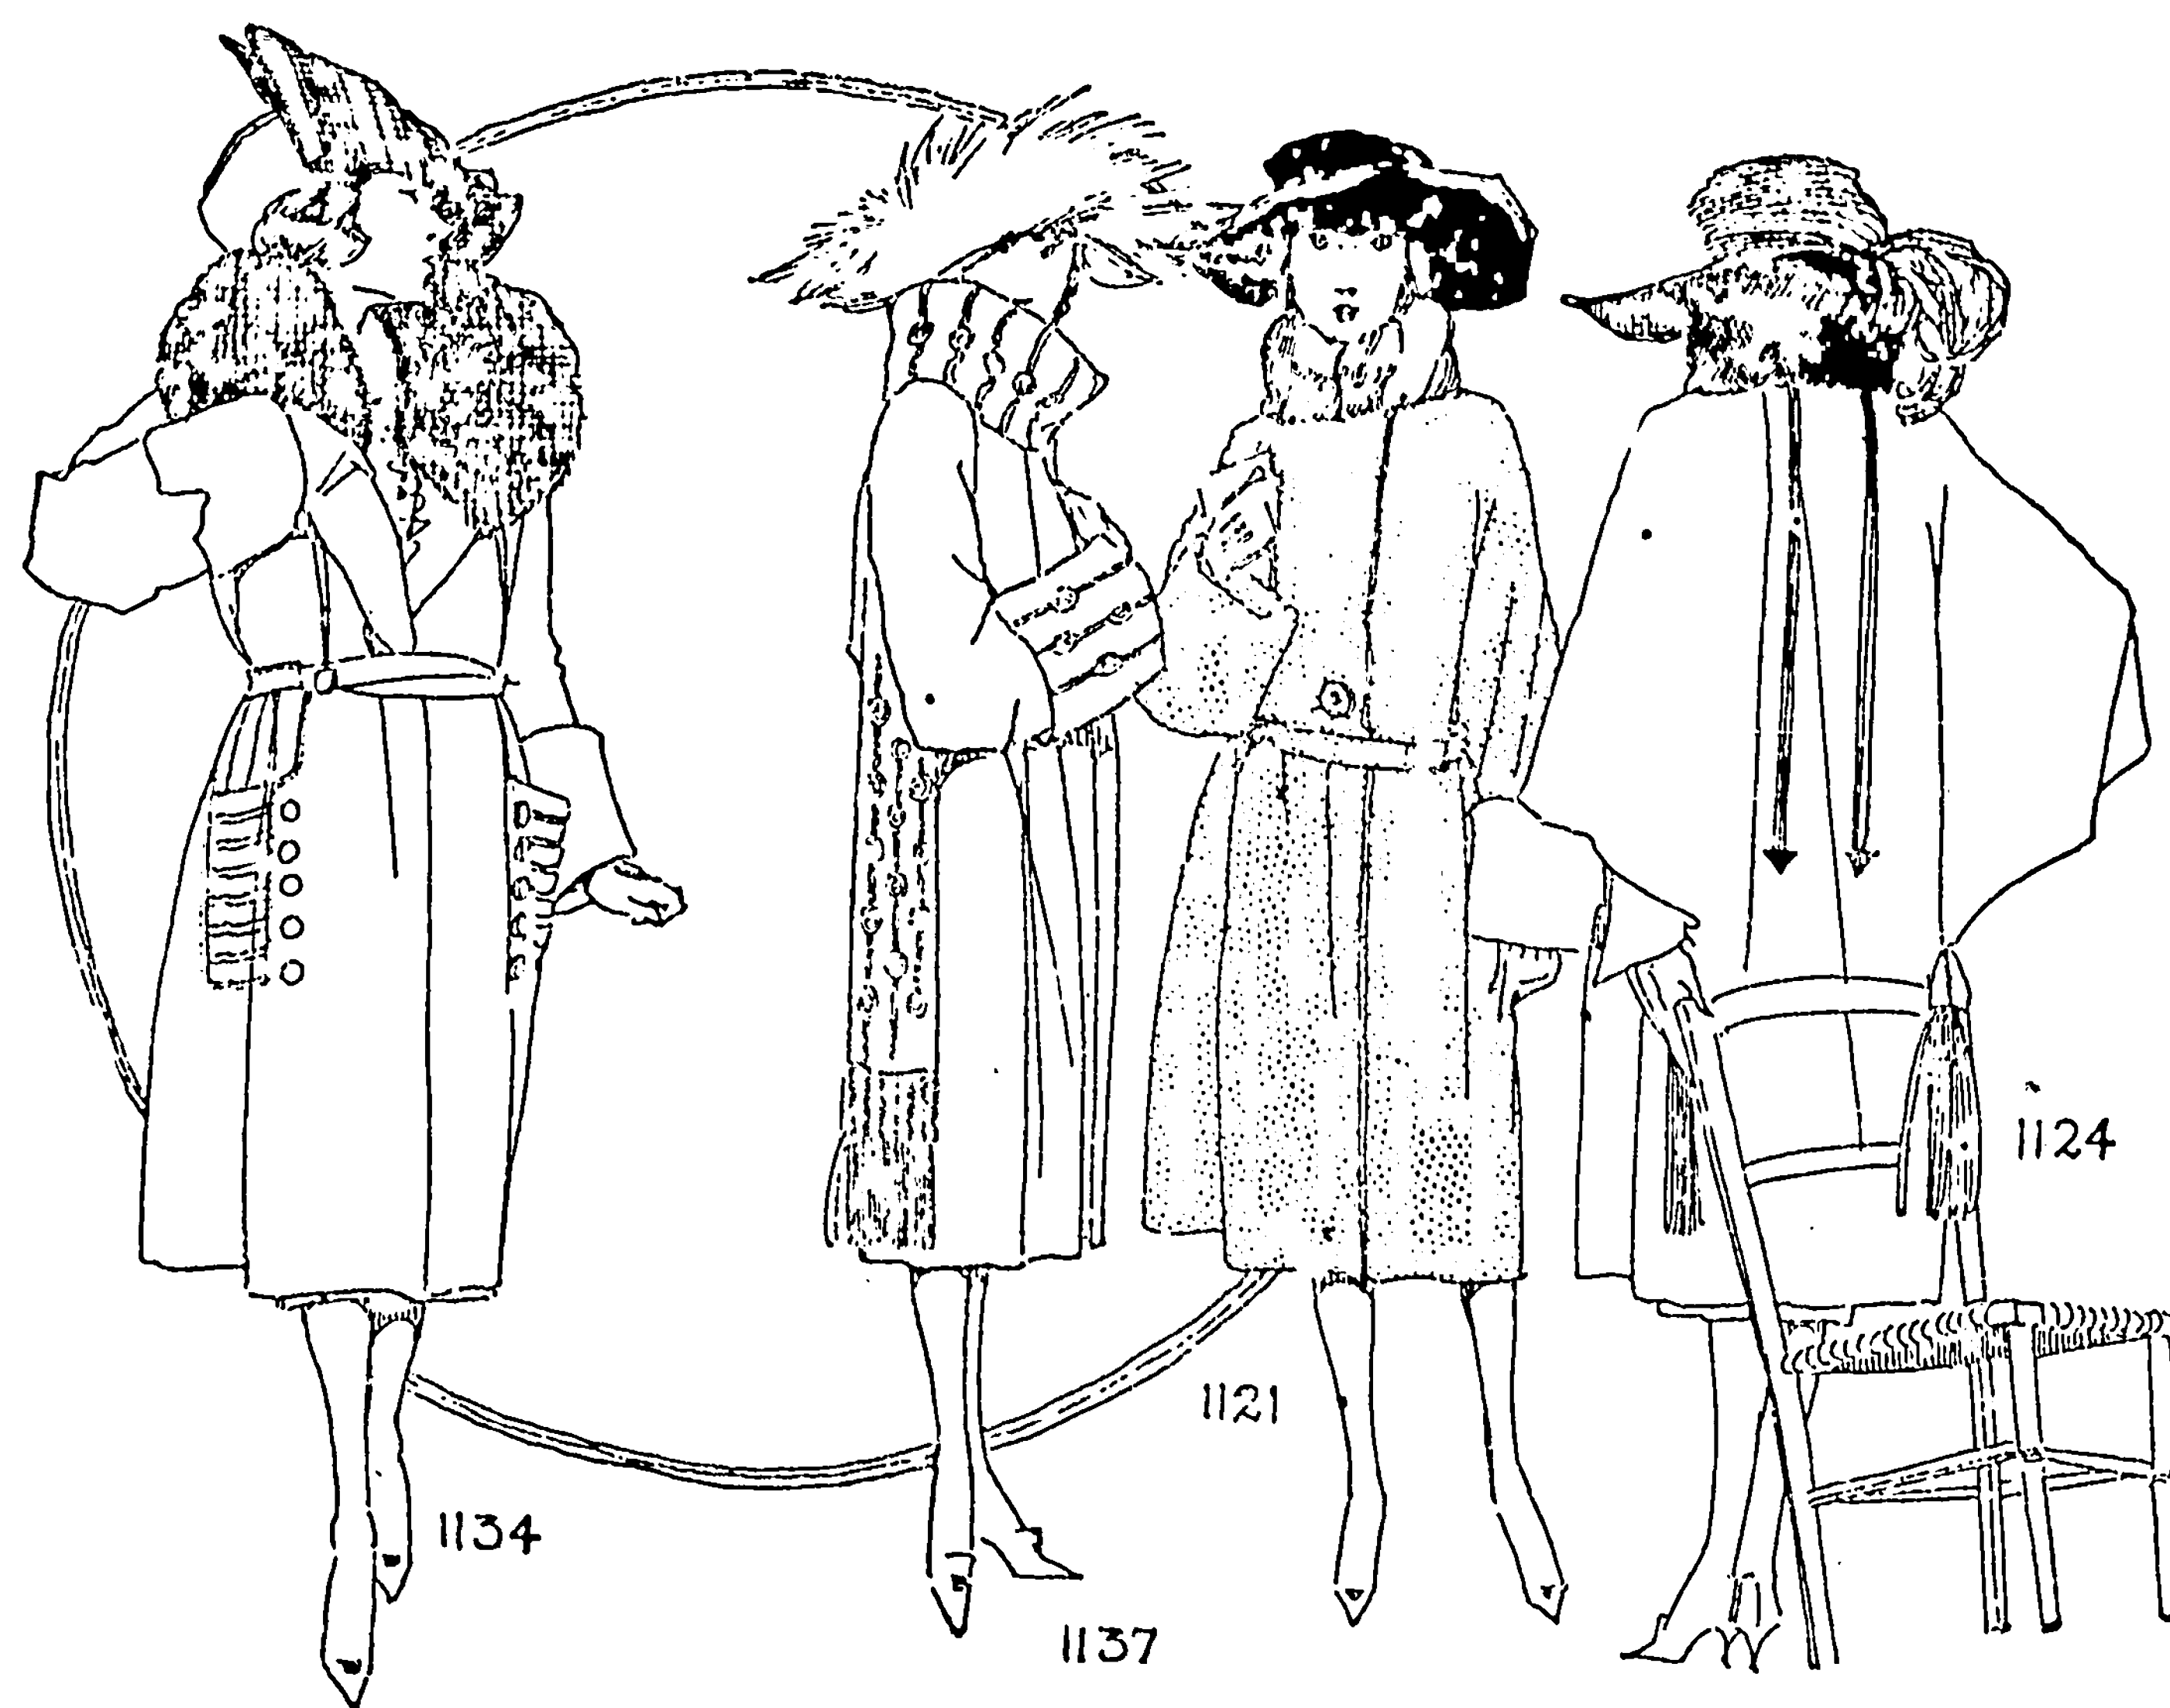

Rev. E. H. Hummelbaugh, pastor of the Salem U. B. church, was re-elected chaplain of the Union Fire Co., Frederick, Md., Monday a week.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS

TO HAVE INSPECTIONS

Through the co-operation of those in charge of five parochial schools in Adams county with representatives of the State Department of Health, more than 800 children will be given medical examinations during the next few weeks. According to the laws of the state of Pennsylvania pupils in the public schools are required to be examined once each year and a report on every child sent to the State Department of Health. The same plan has been adopted by each of the Catholic schools in the county, except one. Physicians have been secured by the schools to make the examinations. Dr. A. C. Rice will visit the McSherrytown schools, Dr. George Seaks, the schools at New Oxford and Bonneauville; Dr. H. S. Lindaman, the schools in Littlestown, and Dr. C. G. Crist, those in Gettysburg. The cost of conducting the examination will be borne by the individual schools as no provision is made by the state to extend the medical tests into private institutions. The Department of Health, however, will aid in checking up the reports and make suggestions for improving sanitary, lighting and heating conditions. Adams county is one of the first in the state to report a large percentage of parochial schools accepting the invitation of the state to inaugurate the medical inspection plan.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Constipation.—Constipation of the bowels is a stoppage of the sewerage system that removes waste matter from the body. It is as necessary that your bowels move regularly once each day, to carry off this waste, as it is that the waste pipes of your home be kept open and carry off the waste from the house. If you would enjoy good health, keep your bowels regular by taking Chamberlain's Tablets when needed.

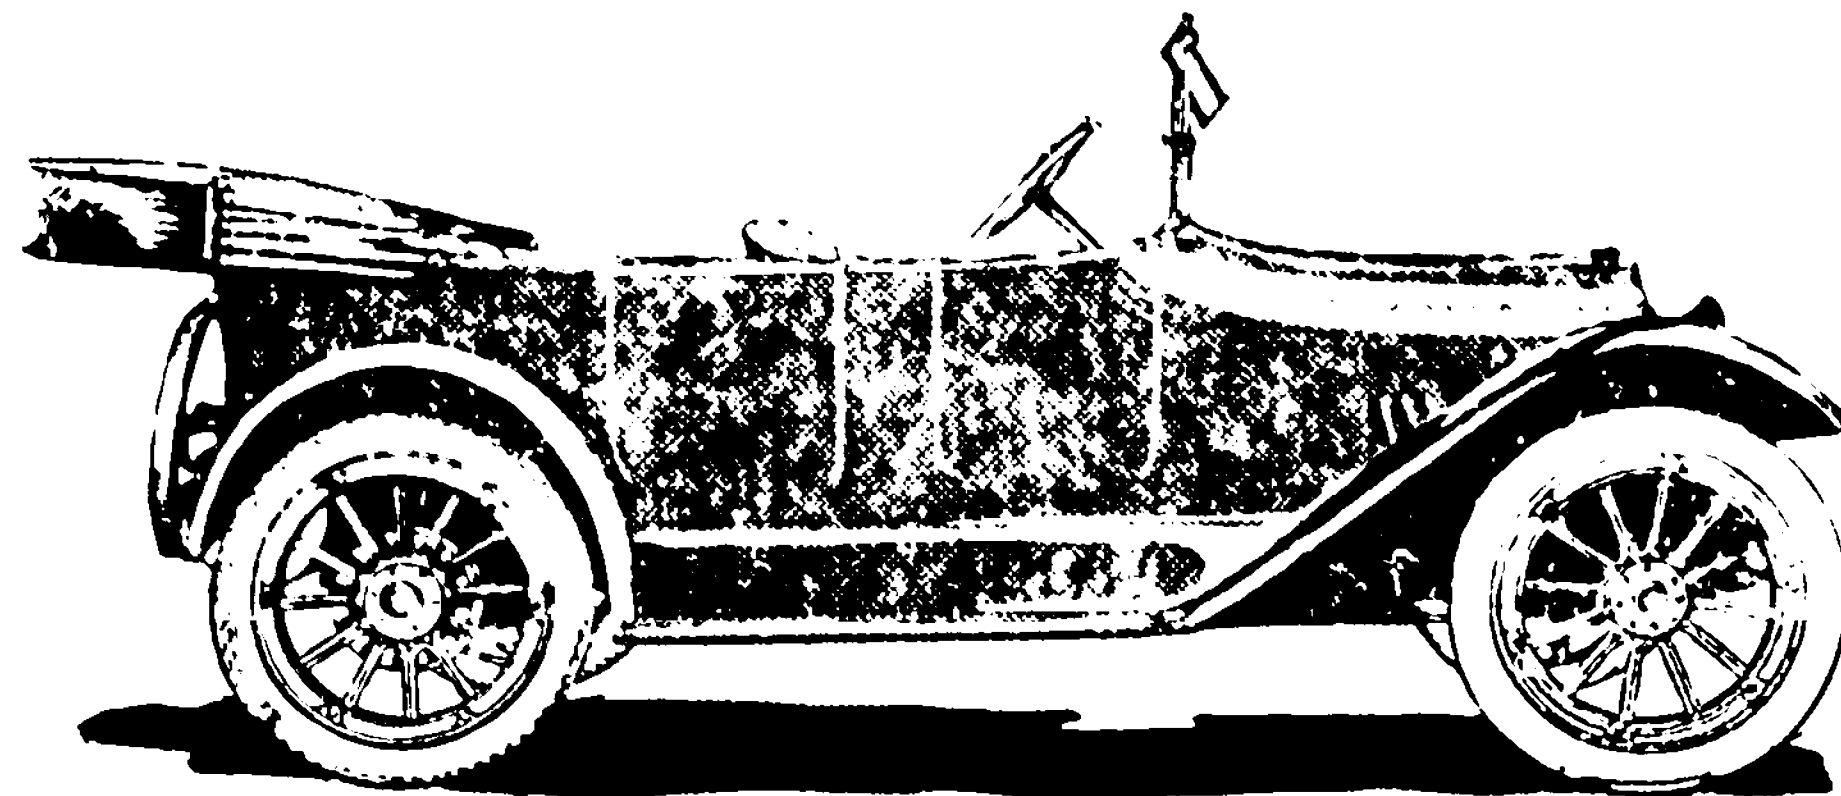

UNDERTAKER CONVICTED

Charles H. Mauk, of Harrisburg, who for a number of years conducted the undertaking business in York Springs, recently was convicted on a charge of pretending to sell to Millard W. McCracken in May, 1919, a casket and shroud to be used for the burial of his brother, Howard H. McCracken, who died in the State Hospital. When Mr. and Mrs. McCracken came a few days later for the funeral they found that the body had been buried. Further investigation brought an admission from Mauk that there had been no minister and a charge of $5 for his services was returned by the undertaker. Becoming suspicious Mr. McCracken arranged to have his brother's body exhumed and when this was done it was found that the body had been buried in a rough pine box, smaller than the ordinary rough box. The body had nothing on but underclothes, there was no lining in the box, only some excelsior with cheese cloth over it. The corpse was found to be in a cramped or crouched position in the box. Prosecution of Mauk followed.

A party of about 35 young ladies from McSherrytown and Hanover made the hearts of the boys in the Paradise Protectors glad on Sunday when they entertained them and gave them a fine supper. At 2:30 p. m. a delightful musical program under the direction of Miss Marie Timmins was rendered in a very creditable manner, and at the conclusion each of the 124 boys was presented with a toy. After this the boys were invited to the dining hall to partake of a delicious luncheon. At 5 p. m. benediction was given in the Protectors Chapel. In the morning barbers from Hanover and McSherrytown cut the hair of the boys.

Two "peepers", boys, evidently encouraged by former successes in crime, were caught Saturday evening after an exciting chase over McSherrytown by a posse of young men, after they had attempted to enter the cellar of a house. They were taken before Burgess Pfaltzgraff for a hearing, who, in view of their age, allowed them to depart with light sentences. One of the boys, living near that town, was ordered to remain out of it for 30 days. The other boy was ordered to remain in his home at night for the same length of time under penalty of arrest.

Forty-one inquiries were made after one house for rent in Hanover.

Altho money can not heal the wounds of sorrow borne by Mr. and Mrs. Monroe Markle, Hanover, whose three little boys were fatally burned on the afternoon of December 28, yet it can be of aid, and the sum of $637.81 has been handed to the parents by Chief Crabbs, who made a canvass of citizens, which was responded to liberally. Mrs. Markle who, in an attempt to save the lives of her children, was seriously burned, is still in the York Hospital, suffering from her injuries, and her condition is still serious.

S. Bolan, Oberlin where he had attended a party given to F. & M. students, was attacked by three highwaymen in Negro Hollow, a desolate place between Enbaut and Oberlin. He put up a terrific battle and held them at bay until an auto stopped. The thugs then disappeared into the shadows and fortunately obtained none of his valuables. Aside from being roughly handled and badly frightened Mr. Wentz escaped tortures usually meted out by thugs.

Mr. Miller offered to lease the property for 15 years, with a 5-year renewal privilege at an annual rental of $400 a year, and he agreed to expend $8,000 on permanent improvements during the 15 year period. It is understood repairs will be made and the place opened for tourists this summer.

Two weeks ago Drs. Spatz and McDowell attended a fox chase near Hunterstown. Dr. Spatz, who is no horseman, was induced to ride an old hunter. He was instructed to hold on to the saddle, which he did. The old hunter, which the latter was riding, sped away over the fields with the doctor intact, following the fox and hounds. After a very exciting chase for the fox, more so for the doctor, the fox was caught. No sooner had the hounds caught the fox, the doctor arrived, and his conscience worried, he dismounted and took the fox from its captors, bringing it back to safety. After the chase the doctor procured a necklace chain from a Hunterstown jeweler and took the fox to York.—Gazette & Daily.

ORDERED GIRL EXAMINED

Friday, Judge McPherson handed down an order directing Doctors J. P. Dalby and J. McCrea Dickson, Gettysburg, to examine the mental and physical condition of Marie Shenk, chief beneficiary under the will of the late Sampson Albert, on Sunday at her home in Carlisle. The Court likewise directed in the order that should these doctors disagree as to the condition of Marie Shenk, Miss Shenk be allowed to call in a third doctor for a consultation with the other two and the consensus of opinion of the majority of the two will be recognized by the court.

Argument on the case brought by Phoebe Shelly, a sister, and George Albert, a brother of the deceased man, in an effort to dispose of Marie Shenk as executrix and beneficiary of the estate which amounted to almost $50,000, was to have been heard on January 2. Marie Shenk is alleged to have pleaded sickness and again on January 4 she stated that she was still indisposed. It was then that the attorney for the brother and sister asked that the court appoint the physicians. The argument on the case was postponed until January 11, when the doctors made their report.

War—Made by Chemists and Engineers on Women, Children and Old Folk

By JOHN GALSWORTHY, in New York Times.

Last, and by far the most insidious and sinister factor in the international situation, is the emergence of new methods of warfare, which involve the wholesale destruction of civilian population. To be quite frank, we may dismiss at once any hope of a new patriotism, of any wide feeling that self-interest is identical with the good of other nations and the world at large, so long as the fear of wholesale civilian destruction hangs over the peoples of each country.

If the nations, at this point of the world's history, cannot agree to debar chemists and scientists from pursuing researches for destructive purposes; if they will not officially put the air and the depths of water out of court in warfare; guarantee the immunity of merchant shipping in time of war, so that blockades are no longer possible; and take definite measures to see that all these international prohibitions are not secretly evaded; then, we may call what conferences on disarmament we like, and limit the number of men and ships as we please; we may write and we may talk about a "new patriotism" and "world salvation," and it will all be just beating the air.

Limitation of outworn weapons, however desirable to ease our pockets for the moment, and idealistic talk about world-citizenship are not going to lessen the real danger of our times. Nor will it subdue the individuals of each nation the half-conscious fear and distrust of other nations, based on knowledge that by devilish invention they may some day be suddenly poisoned or starved out of existence wholesale.

The truth, not yet really grasped, even by thinkers, in spite of all the warnings of the last war, is this: War will no longer be made by soldiers on soldiers in manful fashion, but by politicians, chemists and engineers, on women, children and old folk. War threatens civilians as it never threatened them before. It has become sheer blackguardism.

If the nations cannot nip such a grotesque development in the bud, and so remove the dread of it, small at present, but insidious, ever spreading, and perfectly justified, from the minds of us all—what earthly hope is there of a new patriotism, which shall feel for this whole beautiful world what we now feel for our lovely corner of it?

"Great Monetary Loss Can Be of No Consideration When Compared—"

By CHARLES M. SCHWAB, American Steel-Maker.

It was stated at some of the sessions of the recent League of Nations meeting in Geneva—it has often been carelessly suggested in the press—that the flame of war is in great measure kept alive by those interested in the private building of naval ships and the manufacturers of munitions of war. I can, of course, speak only for myself, but I believe I know and express the sentiments of others placed in similar positions to mine when I say this:

I am at the head of the largest war materials manufacturing works in the world. The shipyards of my company build more naval ships than are built in any other yards under one management in the United States.

But I have been thrilled beyond expression, as has every good American, by that brilliant and statesmanlike scheme laid before the conference in Washington by Secretary Hughes. The carrying out of that plan may involve great monetary loss in some quarters, but such a thing as financial loss can be of no consideration when compared to the inestimable boon to mankind which would be involved in the realization of that magnificent plan.

National Campaign Committee of All Parties Should Be Abolished

By J. HAMILTON LEWIS, Former U. S. Senator From Illinois.

The national campaign committee of all political parties ought to be abolished. There is now no need for any of them in the national elections. The state election machinery in each state in every presidential election conducts the elections which choose president, senators and congressmen at the same time the state officials are elected. The day has gone when there was conflict and jealousies between state and nation and their officials, as well as when there were different dates for state and national elections.

We should now have only state committees, aided by a campaign committee chosen by the candidates for president and vice president as they are named by the conventions, this campaign committee to merely co-operate with the state committee in each state.

This annual party dissension in all parties in off years over the chairman of a presidential campaign committee is as profitless as a mutiny in an army preparing for war over the selection of a drill sergeant for dress parade.

The Average American Eats Exactly 2,664 Pounds of Food Each Year

By JAMES J. DAVIS, U. S. Secretary of Labor.

Do you know that the average American eats more than a ton of food every year? The exact figures are 2,664 pounds per man per year. That is a costly item. We certainly don't stint ourselves.

And does this Gargantuan appetite really make for national health? Is it any better for the body than it is for the pocketbook? I notice by these same figures from the bureau of labor statistics that the average American wage-earner manages to keep the spark of life in his body on 1,775 pounds of food a year. The A. E. P. ration was 1,540 pounds per man per year, and if I recollect rightly the American soldier did some pretty fair work on that allowance.

The medical authorities may make what they please of these figures, but I notice that the average Japanese consumes 905 pounds of food per annum. The average Jap adult gets 30 pounds of fruit, as against 250 pounds, the average with us.

"Many things happen between the cup and the lip."

ARE you quite sure that you hold your spoon in the correct manner? It does seem a funny thing that so much depends on such an apparently unimportant matter. But you know yourself that if you see a person holding a spoon as you would a screwdriver or a garden spade, with the palm of the hand over the top and the thumb and fingers clasped on the reverse side, you would immediately put him down as lacking in good breeding. On the contrary, if you see a man or woman holding a spoon in an extremely mincing manner, with the little finger and ring finger held as far away from the other fingers as possible, you immediately assume that that person is trying to impress you with his extreme daintiness.

Properly, the spoon should be held between thumb and first finger, resting on the middle finger. Be careful not to hold it too far down toward the bowl.

Always raise the spoon to your mouth so that the side of the bowl touches the mouth, and not the point of the spoon. To do this one has to bring the spoon up at right angles, in a very awkward manner. Remember that you should never drink or sip from the tip of the spoon. Liquids should be taken from the side of the spoon, without slipping them and without actually putting the entire spoon into the mouth. Solids should be taken by laying the spoon between the lips and taking the contents into the mouth without the polishing process that is characteristic of children when they especially enjoy what they are eating.

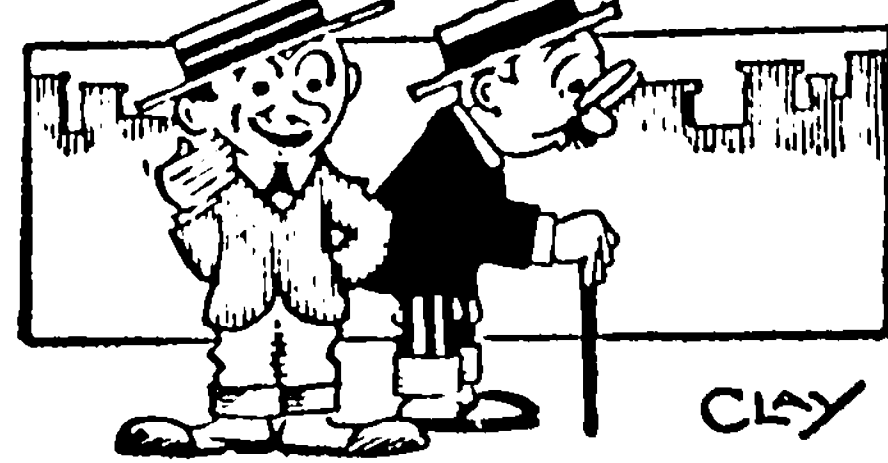

Soft-boiled eggs are eaten with a spoon from the shell. It is a good idea to have bone egg spoons that do not discolor with the action of the egg, as do silver spoons.

Bouillon, when served in cups; tea, coffee and other beverages served in cups, should be taken with the spoon only enough to make sure that they are properly seasoned and that they are cool enough to drink. It is extremely bad form to consume the entire cupful with sips of the spoon.

No vegetables should be taken with a spoon that can possibly be eaten with a fork. To be sure, such things as thin-stewed tomatoes, served in side saucers, cannot very easily be managed with a fork. Perhaps the right way to prepare them for the table is in solid enough form so that they can be managed without a spoon. Peas should not be eaten with a spoon, and for that reason it is no longer considered best to serve them cooked in milk. Many persons insist that ice cream is a fork food, and not spoon food. However, if spoons are served with this dainty, do not hesitate to use them. There is really nothing very bad form about using a spoon, and a great many persons do who are beyond reproach in table manners.

OLIVE

OLIVE, the sign of peace and joy, is one of the few feminine names which has no early Greek or Latin origin. It first appears in Italy, the land of the olive tree, whose branches have come to be the symbol of peace and harmony. Etymologists claim that, though it is closely associated with the Italian Oliviero, it would never have achieved popularity as a name but for the Teutonic Olaf (forefather's relic).

Oliviero, the paladin of Charlemagne, was most frequently in use among all those of the circle of paladins, and gave rise to the saying which has since become a proverb, "giving a Howland for an Oliver." English knights of high, chivalrous repute frequently bore the name of Oliver until the emittance of the Protector made "Old Noll" a word of hate among the cavaliers.

The feminine form, Olive, which was invented in Italy, was brought to England by the influx of Italian literature in the Tudor reign. Its form was then Olivia, and as such it still has great vogue, especially in literature and poetry. Goldsmith calls the unfortunate daughter of his humbly "Vicar of Wakefield" Olivia, and many other heroines of that literary period bore the same name.

It is only of recent years that Olive gained preference over Olivia. The change came about in England, but was not long in reaching this country, and now Olive is a popular and fashionable name here.

The fire opal is the gem assigned to her. Its glowing, ever-changing heart promises good fortune to her or whom it is intended as an ornament and a talisman. The chrysanthemum is her flower. Wednesday is her lucky day and three her lucky number.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ACADEMY"

IN THE days when Athens was regarded as the seat of learning for the entire world, the suburb, Akademia—so-called because it was supposed originally to have belonged to the Attic hero, Akademos—was used by the citizens as a gymnasium and conference ground. It was here that Plato purchased a small garden, in which he opened his school and taught his philosophy for more than 50 years, his scholars receiving the name of "Academicians." Because of this, other public places designed for the gathering of the learned and the teaching of the young have been known as academies.

Cicero also had a villa or country-seat near Puteoli, which he called Akademia, in memory of the suburb of Athens, and it was this name which inspired him to name his famous work, "Questions Akademicae." Possibly because of this fact Italy has had the honor of founding more academies of world-wide renown than any other nation, though the Academie Francaise, founded by Cardinal Richelieu in 1635, stands at the top of the list today.

forgot to play dead. He just stood still and stared, but in a jiffy down he tumbled on the floor.

"We were in Mr. Coon's house when they opened the bag, but he did not stop. Out of the door he flew, and when I stopped laughing Mr. Possum was gone also. But I don't care; it was the funniest sight I ever saw, and I was well paid. And any time you want any help, Mr. Bear, I shall be glad to oblige you."

Mr. Bear thanked him, and when he went to sleep that night he said to himself: "I guess Mr. Coon and Mr. Possum have had a lesson that will last them awhile and a fellow can sleep in peace, even if he has a pantry filled with preserves."

(Copyright.)

MR. BEAR'S TRICK

MR. BEAR had been bothered a great deal by having his vegetables and fruits that he had preserved stolen from his pantry while he slept.

He felt quite sure it was Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon that helped themselves, but he had never been able to keep awake and catch them.

Often he had tried, but every time he had fallen asleep, and when he awoke they had been there and taken with them some of his stores.

Mr. Bear was a good-natured fellow and he disliked to harm anyone, so he set to work to think of a plan by which he could punish them and stop them from taking his preserves without catching them himself.

But, think as he would, there was only one plan that came to his mind, and, while it was dangerous for Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon if they did not get away, he decided to risk it, or rather, let them take the risk.

One night Mr. Bear awoke, hearing some one running, and up he jumped from his hiding place, where he had again fallen asleep, and ran off in the direction he had heard the noise.

But instead of catching anyone he stumbled over a big bag of goodies which Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon had dropped when they heard him coming, and then it was that Mr. Bear made up his mind to try his scheme.

He went out of the woods and over to the farm not far away, and there he hid under some bushes and waited for Mr. Dog to come that way.

"Mr. Dog," he said, when he came along, "I have never harmed you and I shall not now, but you must do something for me tonight or I shall be very cross."

Mr. Bear had one paw on Mr. Dog and his teeth were not the sort Mr.

Dog wished to test us to their sharpness, so he meekly asked what it was that Mr. Bear wished him to do and said he was always willing to oblige a friend.

"I want you to do something that will give you a great deal of sport as well as help me, if you follow my plan," said Mr. Bear, as he walked away with Mr. Dog tucked under one arm.

All day he kept Mr. Dog in his house, but he was so polite and gave him such nice things to eat that Mr. Dog was glad he had carried him off.

When it was dark Mr. Bear took Mr. Dog to the place in the woods

Up He Jumped and Ran Off.

where Mr. Coon and Mr. Possum had dropped the bag and put him inside with some stones which he had wrapped well, so Mr. Dog would not be hurt.

"Now, do not move or bark until they untie the bag," cautioned Mr. Bear, "and if you do not see two astonished faces when you jump out my name is not Johnnie Bear."

Mr. Bear trotted off home and pretty soon along came Mr. Possum and Mr. Coon looking for the bag. "If he did not find it," said Mr. Possum, "it will be along here somewhere."

"Here it is," said Mr. Coon, spying the bag, and, picking it up, he tossed it over one shoulder and off they ran. "Did you catch either of them?" asked Mr. Bear the next day when Mr. Dog went around to tell him about it.

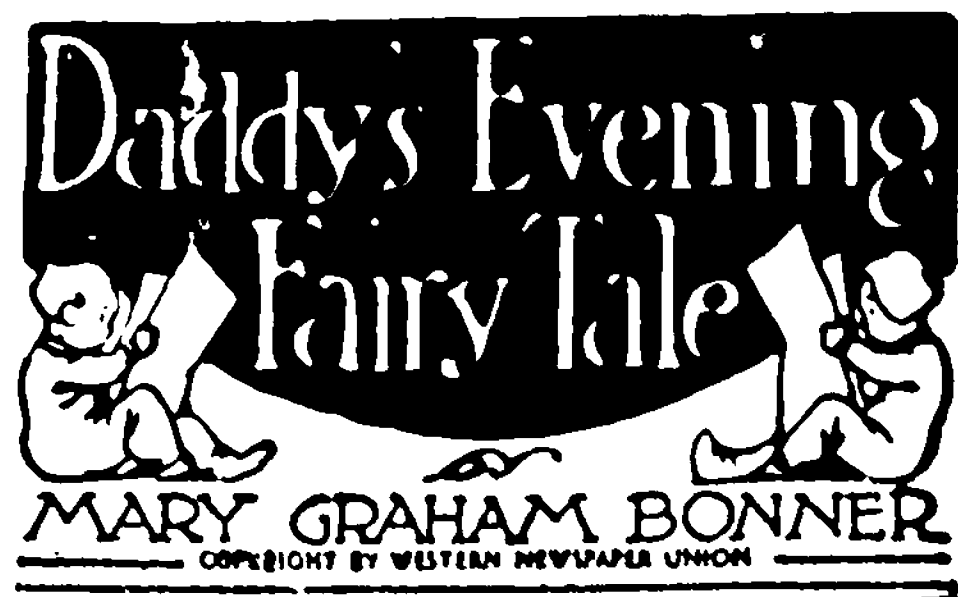

"No, I laughed so long that when I stopped they were both gone," said Mr. Dog. "Mr. Coon's mouth flew open with surprise and he tumbled over backward as I jumped out when he untied the bag. Mr. Possum almost

Billie Dove

The charming Billie Dove, popular musical show girl, has made her screen debut in a big motion picture. The winsome little dancer has a reputation of being a tireless worker. Very few actresses can appear on the legitimate stage at night and then work before the camera during the day. Miss Dove was an artist's model before going on the stage.

ANIMAL WAYS.

Now I wanted to see the Ant-Eater. I sent word that I was going to see him, and the keeper told me, when I arrived, that the Ant-Eater was ready to see his caller.

He had been expecting me, and so had not gone out, which was very polite of the Ant-Eater, now, wasn't it?

He has a very long snout—very, very long and thin. His mouth is no more than a tiny, narrow slit, and when he is in his South American home he eats only ants. In the zoo he eats chopped meat and eggs and also laps up milk with his long thin tongue.

And now I shall translate for you his talk—which the keeper helped me to translate:

"When I'm free," the Ant-Eater said, "my two end points are all important. First of all I free the country of many naughty ants. I enjoy the good work I do. Many do enjoy work, you know—the Ant-Eater is among them. With my bushy tail I swish up the ants and get them together in large numbers."

"But that is not the only way my tail is useful. I use it in the hot summer time to fan myself with and to keep off the flies that might come to have a chat on my back."

"You know, flies don't care where they stop for a talk—or a rest—it might be on a person's forehead. It makes no difference to them!"

"And my tail can also be used as an umbrella. I can take a nap and cover myself up with my tail and not bother to get up for a little shower and go in my house."

"My tail keeps the rain off my body and I shake it off my tail when I awaken."

"If you're going to talk about your two important ends," said a strange looking lizard, "you should think of me. For I am more important at either end and at both ends than you ever dreamed of being."

"My name is the Stumped-Tailed or Two-Headed or Shingle-Back Lizard. Three names have I and two heads, and that is as much as any creature should ask for or receive!"

"My back does look like a shingle roof with the shingles laid over each other—you know what I mean. But most important is the fact that I have two heads. By each I have a pair of little legs, and they're made just alike."

"I am from Australia, you know. If you don't know it, you do now. This is the most interesting thing of all. I can travel either way—yes, I can go in either direction, forward or backward, and whenever I want to change my mind I don't have to turn around—I just start going backwards, which at once becomes forward for me!"

"And here," said the Two-Headed Lizard, "is my little brother."

There, sure enough, was another just like him, and when the keeper took them both up in his hands, each with two heads turned toward me, I didn't know whether I was looking at four animals or two.

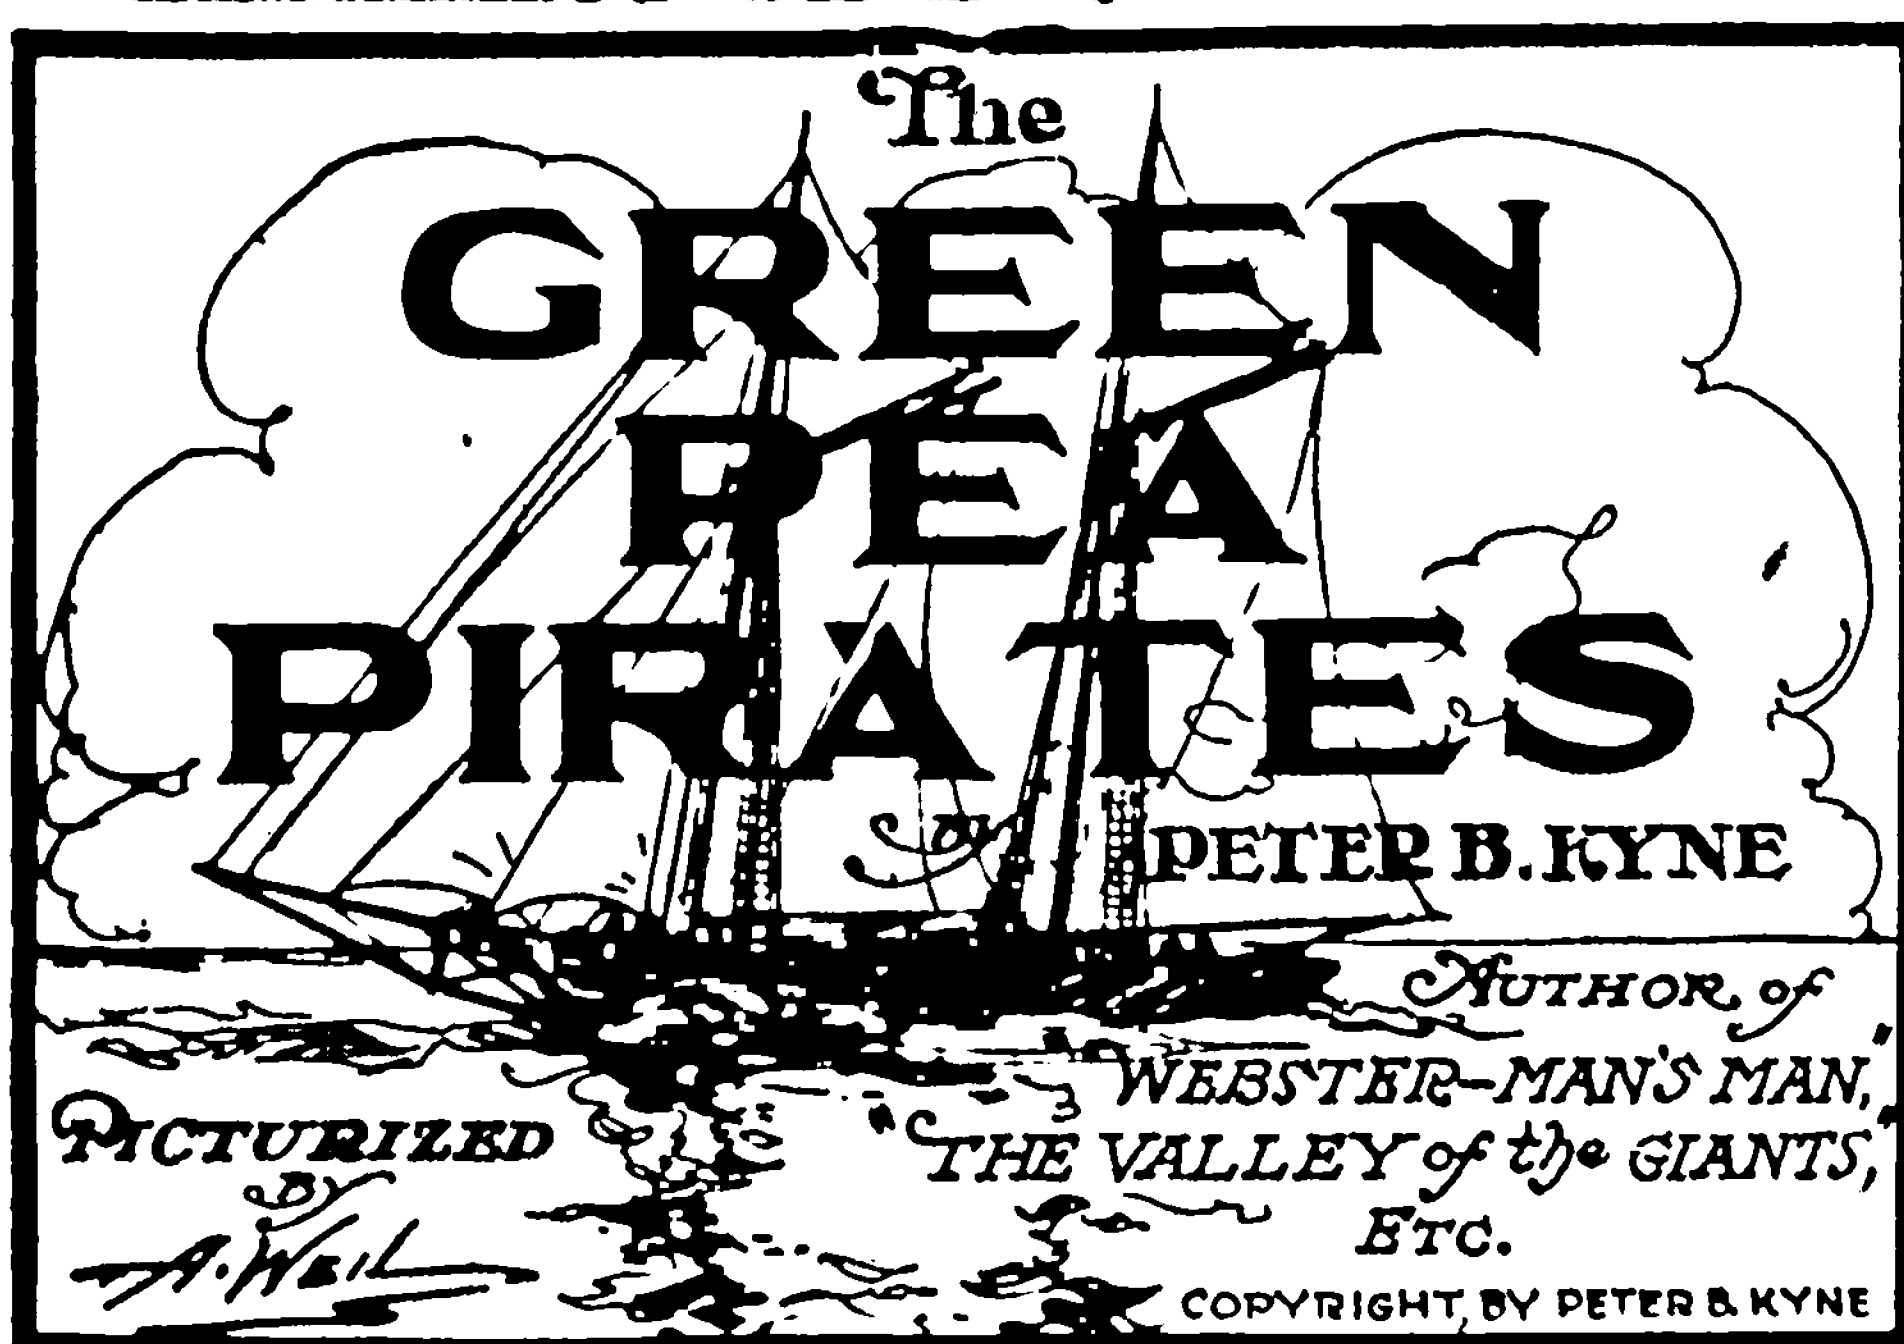

But then I had to hurry over to see Mrs. Lemur Monkey from Madagascar, and her young twins. There they were curled around her back, which is the way monkeys, both big and small, carry their babies when they are climbing in their tree homes or even in the zoo.

All mother monkeys are very, very devoted to their young, and little Mother Lemur was certainly no exception. The children were sleepy little fuzzy dears, and Mother Lemur had no time for me. So I listened to her as she talked to them in her sweet little squealing voice, and later on I heard a strange kind of monkey-singing. It was Mother Lemur singing a tree-cradle song to her babies as she held them in her loving monkey arms.

As far as I could make it out, this was her song:

Little ones, little ones, I love you so,
"I'll keep you safe from every foe,
I'll watch you and guard you, you need have no fears,
For I'll never let harm touch my precious dears.
My darlings, my darlings, I love you so dearly,
That no lullaby song can describe my love really.
But you can feel how I love you and that tells you more Than I should sing these words over and over.
Ah, little ones, little ones, I love you so,
I'll keep you safe from every foe!"

And the twins snuggled closer and went sound to sleep!

"There's one thing more that we mustn't neglect," warned Mr. Gibney before the meeting broke up. "We've got to run this little vessel into some dog-hole where there's a nice beach and smooth water, and change her name. I notice that her old name Reina Maria is screwed into her bows and across her stern in raised gilt letters, contrary to law and custom. We'll snip 'em off, sandpaper every spot where there's a letter, and repaint it; after which we'll rig up a stagin' over her bow and stern, and cut her new name, 'Maggie II.' right into her planks. Nobody'll ever suspect her name's been changed. I notice that the official letters and numbers cut into her main beam is F-C-P—0957. I'll change the F to E, and the C to O, and the P to R. A handy man with a wood chisel can do lots of things. He can change those nines to eights, the five to a six, and the seven to a nine. I've seen 't done before. Then we'll rig a foretopmast and a spinnaker boom on her, and bend a fisherman's staysail. Nothing like it when you're sailing a little off the wind. Scraggs, you have the papers of the old Maggie, and we all have our licenses regular enough. Dig up the old papers, Scraggs, and I'll doctor 'em up to fit the Maggie II. As for our armament, we'll dismount the guns and stow 'em away in the hold until we get down on the Colombian coast, and while we're lying in Panama repairing the holes where my shots went through her, and puttin' new planks in her decks where the old plankin' has been scored by shrapnel, those parakeets will think we're as peaceful as chipmunks. Better look over your supplies, McGuffey, and see if there's any paint aboard. I'd just as lief give the old girl a different dress before we drop anchor in Panama."

"Gib," said Captain Scraggs, earnestly, "I'll keel-haul and shull-drag the man that says you ain't got a great head."

"By the lord," supplemented McGuffey, "you have."

The commodore smiled and tapped his frontal bone with his forefinger. "Imagination, my lads, imagination," he said, and reached for the last of the punch.

Exactly three weeks from the date of the naval battle which took place off the Coronado islands, and whereby Mr. Gibney became commodore and managing owner of the erstwhile Mexican coast patrol schooner Reina Maria, that vessel sailed out of the harbor of Panama completely rejuvenated. Not a scar on her shapely lines gave evidence of the sanguinary engagement through which she had passed.

Mr. Gibney had her painted a creamy white with a dark blue waterline. She had had her bottom cleaned and scraped and the copper sheathing overhauled and patched up. Her sails had been overhauled, inspected, and repacked wherever necessary, and in order to be on the safe side, Mr. Gibney, upon motion duly made by him and seconded by McGuffey (to whom the seconding of the Gibney motions had developed into a habit), purchased an extra set of new sails. The engines were overhauled by the faithful McGuffey and a large store of distillate stored in the hold. Captain Scraggs, with his old-time aversion to expense, made a motion (which was seconded by McGuffey before he had taken time to consider its import) providing for the abolition of the office of chief engineer while the Maggie II was under sail, at which time the chief ex-officio was to hold himself under the orders of the commodore and be transferred to the deck department if necessary. Mr. Gibney approved the measure and it went into effect. Only on entering or leaving a port, or in case of chase by an enemy, were the engines to be used, and McGuffey was warned to be extremely saving of his distillate.

Mr. Gibney made a splendid job of changing the vessel's name, and as she chugged lazily out of Panama bay and lifted to the long ground-swell of the Pacific, it is doubtful if even her late Mexican commander would have recognized her. She was indeed a beautiful craft, and Commodore Gibney's heart swelled with pride as he stood aft, conning the man at the wheel, and looked her over. It seemed like a sacrilege now, when he reflected how he had trained the gun of the old Maggie on her that day off the Coronados, and it seemed to him now even a greater sacrilege to have brazenly planned to enter her as a privateer in the struggles of the republic of Colombia. The past tense is used advisedly, for that project was now entirely off, much to the secret delight of Captain Scraggs, who, if the hero of one naval engagement, was not anxious to take part in another. In Panama the freebooters of the Maggie II learned that during Mr. Gibney's absence on his filibustering trip the Colombian revolutionists had risen and struck their blow. After the fashion of a hot-headed and impetuous people, they had entered the contest absolutely untrained. As a result, the war had lasted just two weeks, the leaders had been incontinently shot, and the white-winged dove of peace had once more spread her pinions along the borders of the Gold Coast.

Commodore Gibney was disgusted beyond measure, and at a special meeting of the syndicate, called in the cabin of the Maggie II that same evening, it was finally decided that they should embark on an indefinite trading cruise in the South seas, or until such time as it seemed their services must be required to free a downtrodden people from a tyrant's yoke.

Captain Scraggs and McGuffey had never been in the South seas, but they had heard that a fair margin of profit was to be wrung from trade in copra, shell, coconuts, and kindred tropical products. They so expressed themselves. To this suggestion, however, Commodore Gibney waved a deprecating paw.

"Legitimate tradin', boys," he said, "is a nice, sane, healthy business, but the profits is slow. What we want is quick profits, and while it ain't set down in black and white, one of the principal objects of this syndicate is to lead a life of wild adventure. In tradin', there ain't no adventure to speak of. We ought to do a little black-birdin', or raid some of those Jap pearl fisheries off the northern coast of Formosa."

"But we'll be chased by real gunboats if we do that," objected Captain Scraggs. "Those Jap gunboats shoot to kill. Can't you think of somethin' else, Gib?"

"Well," said Mr. Gibney, "for a starter, I can. Suppose we just head straight for Kandavu Island in the Fijis, and scheme around for a cargo of black coral? It's only worth about fifty dollars a pound. Kandavu lays somewhere in latitude 22 south, longitude 178 west, and when I was there last it was fair reekin' with cannibal savages. But there's tons of black coral there, and nobody's ever been able to sneak in and get away with it. Every time a boat used to land at Kandavu, the native niggers would have a white-man stew down on the beach, and it's got so that skippers give the island a wide berth."

"Gib, my dear boy," chattered Captain Scraggs, "I'm a man of peace and I—"

"Scraggsy, old stick-in-the-mud," said Mr. Gibney, laying an affectionate hand on the skipper's shoulder, "you're nothin' of the sort. You're a fightin' tarantula, and nobody knows it better'n Adelbert P. Gibney. I've seen you in action, Scraggsy. Remember that. It's all right for you to say you're a man of peace and advise me and McGuffey to keep out of the track of trouble, but we know that away down low you're goin' around lookin' for blood, and that once you're up agin the enemy, you never bat an eyelash. Eh, McGuffey?"

McGuffey nodded; whereupon, Captain Scraggs, making but a poor effort to conceal the pleasure which Mr. Gibney's rude compliment afforded him, turned to the rail, glanced seaward, and started to walk away to attend to some trifling detail connected with the boat falls.

"All right, Gib, my lad," he said, affecting to resign himself to the inevitable, "have it your own way. You're a commodore and I'm only a plain captain, but I'll follow wherever you lead. I'll go as far as the next man and we'll glom that black coral if we have to slaughter every man, woman and child on the island. Only, when we're sizzlin' in a pot don't you up and say I never warned you, because I did. How d'ye propose intimidatin' the natives, Gib?"

"Scraggsy," said the commodore, solemnly, "we've waged a private war agin a friendly nation, licked 'em and helped ourselves to their ship. We've changed her name and rig and her official number and letters and we're sailin' under bogus papers. That makes us pirates, and that old Maggie burgee floatin' at the fore ain't nothin' more nor less than the Jolly Roger. All right! Let's be pirates. Who cares? When we slip into M'galao harbor we'll invite the king and his head men aboard for dinner. We'll get 'em drunk, clap 'em in double irons, and surrender 'em to their weepin' subjects when they've filled the hold of the Maggie II with black coral. If they refuse to come aboard we'll shell the bush with that long gun and the Maxim rapid-fire guns we've got below decks. That'll scare 'em so they'll leave us alone and we can help ourselves to the coral."

"Like playin' post-office," was McGuffey's comment.

The commodore smiled. "I thought you boys would see it that way. Now tomorrow I'm going ashore to buy three divin' outfits and lay in a big stock of provisions for the voyage. In the meantime, while the carpenters are gettin' the ship into shape, we'll leave the first mate in charge while we go ashore and have a good time. I've seen worse places than Panama."

As a result of this conference Mr. Gibney's suggestions were acted upon, and they contrived to make their brief stay in Panama very agreeable. They inspected the work on the canal, marveled at the stupendous engineering in the Culebra Cut, drank a little, gambled a little, McGuffey whipped a bartender. He was ordered arrested, and six spiggoty little policemen, sent to arrest him, were also thrashed. The reserves were called out and a riot ensued. Mr. Gibney, following the motto of the syndicate, I. e.,

All for one and one for all—

United we stand, divided we fall, mixed in the conflict and presently found himself in durance vile. Captain Scraggs, luckily, forgot the motto and escaped, but inasmuch as he was on hand next morning to pay a fine of thirty pesos levied against each of the culprits, he was instantly forgiven. Mr. Gibney vowed that if a United States cruiser didn't happen to be lying in the roadstead, he would have shelled the town in retaliation.

But eventually the days passed, and the Maggie II, well found and ready for sea, shook out her sails to a fair breeze and sailed away for Kandavu. She kept well to the southwest until she struck the southeast trades, when she swung around on her course, headed straight for her destination. It was a pleasant voyage, devoid of incident, and the health of all hands was excellent. Mr. Gibney took daily observations, and was particular to make daily entries in his log when he, Scraggs, and McGuffey were not playing cribbage, a game of which all three were passionately fond.

On the afternoon of the twenty-ninth day after leaving Panama the lookout reported land. Through his glasses Mr. Gibney made out a cluster of tall palms at the southerly end of the island, and as the schooner held lazily on her course he could discern the white breakers foaming over the reefs that guarded the entrance to the harbor.

"That's Kandavu, all right," announced the commodore. "I was there in '89 with Bill McInty in the schooner Dashin' Wave. There's the entrance to the harbor, with the Esk reefs to the north and the Pearl reefs to the south. The channel's very narrow—not more than three cables, if it's that, but there's plenty of water and a good muddy bottom that'll hold. McGuffey, lad, better run below and tune up your engines. It's too dangerous a passage on an ebb-tide for a sailin' vessel, so we'll run in under the powder. Scraggsy, stand by and when I give the word have your crew shorten sail."

Within a few minutes a long white streak opened up in the wake of the schooner, announcing that McGuffey's engines were doing duty, and a nice breeze springing up two points aft the beam, the Maggie heeled over and fairly flew through the water. Mr. Gibney smiled an ecstatic smile as he took the wheel and guided the schooner through the channel. He rounded her up in twelve fathoms, and within five minutes every stitch of canvas was clewed down hard and fast. The sun was setting as they dropped anchor, and Mr. Gibney had lanterns hung along the sail so that it would be impossible for any craft to approach the schooner and board her without being seen. Also the watch on deck that night carried Mauser rifles, six-shooters, and cutlasses. Mr. Gibney was taking no chances.

CHAPTER XI.

"Now, boys," announced Commodore Gibney, as he sat at the head of the officers' mess at breakfast next morning, "there'll be a lot of canoes paddling off to visit us within the hour, so whatever you do, don't allow more than two of these cannibals aboard the schooner at the same time. Make 'em keep their weapons in the canoes with 'em, and at the first sign of trouble shoot 'em down like dogs. It may be that these precautions ain't necessary, but when I was here twenty years ago it was all the rage to kill a white man and eat him. Maybe times has changed, but the harbor and the coast looks just as wild and lonely as they ever did, and I didn't see no sign of missionary when we dropped hook last night. So don't take no chances."

All hands promised that they would take extreme care, to the end that their precious persons might remain intact, so Mr. Gibney finished his cup of coffee at a gulp and went on deck.

The Kandavu aborigines were not long in putting in an appearance. Even as Mr. Gibney came on deck half a dozen canoes shot out from the beach. Mr. Gibney immediately piped all hands on deck, armed them, and nonchalantly awaited the approach of what might or might not turn out to be an enemy.

When the flotilla was within pistol shot of the schooner Mr. Gibney stepped to the rail and motioned them back. Immediately the natives ceased paddling, and a wild-looking fellow stood up in the forward canoe. After the manner of his kind he had all his life soused his head in lime-water when making his savage toilette, and as a result his shock of black hair stood on end and bulged out like a crowded haystack. He was naked, of course, and in his hand he held a huge war club.

"That feller'd eat a rattlesnake," gasped Captain Scraggs. "Shoot him, Gib, if he bats an eye."

"Shut up," said the commodore, a trifle testily; "that's the number-one nigger, who does the talkin'. Hello, boy."

"Hello, cap'n," replied the savage, and salaamed gravely. "You likee buy chicken, buy pig? Maybe you say come 'board, I talk. Me very good friend white master."

"Bless my sweet-scented soul!" gasped the commodore. "What won't them missionaries do next? Cut off my ears if this nigger ain't civilized!" He beckoned to the canoe and it shot alongside, and its brown crew came climbing over the rail of the Maggie II.

Mr. Gibney met the spokesman at the rail and they rubbed noses very solemnly, after the manner of salutation in Kandavu. Captain Scraggs bustled forward, full of importance. "Interduce me, Gib," he said anxiously, and then, while Mr. Gibney favored him with a sour glance, Captain Scraggs stuck out his hand and shook briskly with the native.

"Happy to make your acquaintance," he said. "Scraggs is my name, sir. Shake hands with McGuffey, our chief engineer. Hope you left all the folks at home well. What'd you say your name was?"

The islander hadn't said his name was anything, but he grinned now and replied that it was Tabu-Tabu.

"Well, my bucko," muttered McGuffey, who always drew the color line, "I'm glad to hear that. But you ain't the only thing that's taboo around this packet. You can jest check that war club with the first mate, pendin' our better acquaintance. Hand it over, you black beggar, or I'll hit you a swat in the ear that'll hurt all your relations. And hereafter, Scraggsy, just keep your nigger friends to yourself. I ain't waxin' effusive over this savage, and it's agin my principles ever to shake hands with a colored man. This chap's a d—d ugly customer, and you take my word for it."

Tabu-Tabu grinned again, walked to the rail, and tossed his war club down into the canoe.

"Me good missionary boy," he said, rather humbly.

"McGuffey, my dear boy," protested Captain Scraggs, "don't be so doggone rude. You might hurt this poor lad's feelin's. Of course he's only a simple native nigger, but even a dawg has feelin's. You—"

"A-r-r-r-r!" snarled McGuffey. "You two belay talkin' and snappin' at each other," commanded Mr. Gibney, "an' leave all bargainin' to me. This boy is all right and we'll get along first rate if you two just haul ship and do somethin' useful besides buttin' in on your superior officer. Come along, Tabu-Tabu. Makee little eat down in cabin. You talkee captain."

"Gib, my dear boy," sputtered Captain Scraggs, bursting with curiosity, following the commodore's reappearance on deck, "whatever's in the wind?"

"Money—fortune," said Mr. Gibney, solemnly.

McGuffey edged up and eyed the commodore seriously. "Sure there ain't a little fightin' mixed up in it?" he asked.

"Not a bit of it," replied Mr. Gibney. "You're as safe on Kandavu as if you was in church. This Tabu kid is sort of prime minister to the king, with a heap of influence at court. The crew of a British cruiser stole him for a galley police when he was a kid, and he got civilized and learned to talk English. He was a cannibal in them days, but the chaplain aboard showed him how foolish it was to do such things, and finally Tabu-Tabu got religion and asked as a special favor to be allowed to return to Kandavu to civilize his people. As a result of Tabu-Tabu's efforts, he tells me the king has concluded that when he eats a white man he's flyin' in the face of his own interests, and most generally a gunboat comes along in a few months and shells the bush, and—well, any how, there ain't been a barbecue on Kandavu for ten years. It's a capital crime to eat a man now, and punishable by hollin' the offender alive in palm oil."

"Well," rumbled McGuffey, "this Tabu-Tabu don't look much like a preacher, if you ask me. But how about this black coral?"

"Oh, I've ribbed up a deal with him," said Mr. Gibney. "He'll see that we get all the trade we can lug away. We're the first vessel that's touched here in two years, and they have a thunderin' lot of stuff on hand. Tabu's gone ashore to talk the king into doin' business with us. If he consents, we'll have him and Tabu-Tabu and three or four of the sub-chiefs aboard for dinner, or else he'll invite us ashore for a big feed, and we'll have to go."

"Supposin' the king don't care to have any truck with us?" inquired Mr. Gibney, anxiously.

"In that case, Mac," replied the commodore with a smile, "we'll just naturally shell him out of house and home."

"Well, then," said McGuffey, "let's get the guns ready. Somethin' tells me these people ain't to be trusted, and I'm tellin' you right now, Gib, I won't sleep well tonight unless them two quarter gatlings and the Maxim-Vickers rapid-fire guns is mounted and ready for business."

"All right, Mac," replied Mr. Gibney, in the tone one uses when humoring a baby. "Set 'em up if it'll make you feel more cheerful. Still, I don't see why you want to go actin' so foolish over nothin'."

"Well, Gib," replied the engineer, "I may be crazy, but I ain't no fool, and if there's a dead whale around the ship, I can come pretty near smellin' it."

McGuffey Contented Himself by Paddling Backward and Forward Across the Fo' Castle Head.

"I tell you, Gib, that Tabu-Tabu nigger had a look in his eye for all the world like a cur dog lickin' a bone. I ain't takin' no chances. My old man used to say: 'Bart, whatever you do, allers have an anchor out to windward.'"

"By the left hind leg of the Great Sacred Bull," snapped Captain Scraggs, "if you ain't enough to precipitate war."

"War," replied McGuffey, "is my long suit—particularly war with native niggers. I just naturally crave to punch the ear of anything darker than a Portuguese. Remember how I cleaned out the police department of Panama?"

"Mount the guns if you're goin' to, Mac. If not, for the love of the Lord don't be demoralizin' the crew with this talk of war. All I ask is that you set the guns after I've finished my business here with Tabu-Tabu. He's been on a war vessel, and knows what guns are, and if he saw you mountin' them it might break up our friendly relations. He'll think we don't trust him."

"Well, we don't," replied McGuffey, doggedly.

"Well, we do," snapped Captain Scraggs.

There is always something connected with the use of that pronoun of kings which eats like a canker at the heart of men of the McGuffey breed. That officer now spat on the deck, in defiance of the rules of his superior officers, and glared at Captain Scraggs.

"Speak for yourself, you miserable little wart," he roared. "If you include me on that cannibals' visitin' list, and go to contradictin' me agin, I'll—"

"Mac," interrupted Mr. Gibney, angrily, "control yourself. It's agin the rules to have rag-chewin' and back-bittin' on the Maggie II. Remember our motto: 'All for one and one for all'!"

"Here comes that sneakin' bushy-headed murderer back to the vessel," interrupted McGuffey. "I wonder what devilment he's up to now."

Mr. McGuffey was partly right, for in a few minutes Tabu-Tabu came alongside, climbed aboard, and salaamed. Mr. Gibney, fearful of McGuffey's inability to control his antipathy for the race, beckoned Captain Scraggs and Tabu-Tabu to follow him down into the cabin. Meanwhile, McGuffey contented himself by parading backward and forward across the fo' castle head with a Mauser rifle in the hollow of his arm and his person fairly bristling with pistols and cutlasses. Whenever one of the flotilla of canoes hove to at a respectful distance, showed signs of crossing an imaginary deadline drawn by McGuffey, he would point his rifle at them and swear horribly. He scowled at Tabu-Tabu when that individual finally emerged from the conference with Mr. Gibney and Scraggs and went over the side to his waiting canoe.

No man is big enough to do a lot of things and do them well enough to last. When you take him and spread him over a lot of surface, he makes a layer too thin to form any impression. But if you take him and hammer him with the sledge of a mighty purpose, even if there is not more than one of him to fill a bean-shooter, he will make an impression when he strikes. D. L. Moody.

A DESSERT FOR EVERY DAY

Here is a dessert for each working day, and on Sunday ice cream and cake or a pie of some kind, which may be prepared on Saturday and served on the busiest day of the week.

Fifteen-Minute Pudding.—Mix a batter, using one cupful of flour, one-quarter teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of baking powder and enough good milk or fresh buttermilk to make a drop batter. Butter custard cups and add two tablespoonfuls of canned cherries, juice and all. Add another tablespoonful of batter and fill all the cups about half or two-thirds full. Set in a pan, surround with boiling water and cover closely. Boil for fifteen minutes without uncovering. Be sure there is enough water but not enough to boil over into the pan. Serve with cream and sugar.

Lemon Meringue.—Take one pint of milk, three ounces of sugar, one cupful of fine bread crumbs, two eggs, the juice and rind of a lemon. Mix all ingredients and cook slowly until well set, baking in a deep pie plate. Set away to cool, cover with a meringue and serve cold.

Edinburgh Pudding.—Take one half pound of oatmeal, one cupful of milk, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of flour, one cupful of salt and two ounces of coconut. Cook the oatmeal, salt and water until well cooked. Cool, then in the custard and pour into mold. Serve when molded, sprinkled with coconut and sugar, with cream.

Snow Jelly.—Make Jellies of one apple, raspberry and lemon. Arrange in layers the lemon, then raspberry and when the pineapple is thickening whip it until frothy, pile this on top of the raspberry jelly. Chill before serving.

Mince, pumpkin or apple pie may be served on a day that the dinner is rather light.

The difference between a precious stone and a common stone is not an essential difference, not a difference of substance, but arrangement of the particles—the crystallization. In substance the coal and the diamond are one, but in form and effect how widely they differ. The pearl contains nothing that is not found in the coarse oyster shell. Two men have the same thoughts; they use about the same words in expressing them; yet with one the product is real literature, with the other it is a platitude.—John Burroughs.

SEASONABLE IDEAS

Cakes and cookies will be as delicious if they are allowed to age for a while before using.

Spice Cookies.—Cream one-third of a cupful of butter, add one-half cupful of sugar, one well beaten egg and one cupful of molasses, in which has been dissolved one teaspoonful of soda. Then add three and one-half cupfuls of flour, a little cinnamon, clove and nutmeg and one-half cupful of chopped raisins. A few chopped nuts make an improvement. When well mixed drop by teaspoonfuls on buttered sheets and sprinkle with sugar.

Dutch Peppernuts.—Mix one and one-quarter pounds of brown sugar with two tablespoonfuls of cinnamon and one tablespoonful of cloves. Add one teaspoonful of baking powder. Into this stir three eggs and as much flour as it is possible to work in. Roll thin and cut in circles the size of a quarter; bake in a very slow oven. These little cakes will puff up and are delicious. Ice the flat sides. They will keep for months.

Cranberry Cake.—Cream one cupful of butter and one and one-half cupfuls of light brown sugar, add the well-beaten yolks of three eggs. Have ready and sifted two cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful of soda, a teaspoonful each of cinnamon and nutmeg, and one-half teaspoonful of cloves; add to the sugar and butter. Fold in one and one-half cupfuls of cranberries that have been cooked, put through a ricer and sweetened slightly, then the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Bake in two layers and ice, using some of the strained juice of the cranberries for flavor and color.

Honey Doughnuts.—Doughnuts made of honey and sour milk or cream will keep moist a long time. Two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupfuls of honey, one cupful of sour milk; if sour cream is used take half the butter, one teaspoonful of soda, three cupfuls of flour and two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar. Fry in deep, hot fat.
